ITALIAN PRIESTS SEIZED.

TIMELY RESCUE BY H. M. S. "SERAPH."

ANTI-CHRISTIAN EXCESSES BY SWABUE COMMUNISTS.

REDS RANSACK MISSION.

The British Navy has again proved instrumental in securing the release of a number of foreigners held in captivity by Chinese Communists, for last night H.M.S. Seraph brought into Hongkong, from Swabue, two Italian Catholic Fathers, three Italian Sisters, four Chinese Sisters and one Chinese priest, who had been seized by "Reds."

Swabue, which is not far from Bias Bay, is in the territory controlled by the Hai-Luk Fung Soviet, concerning whose terrorist rule we gave some grim details a few days ago.

It appears that the Communists seized these members of the Italian Mission five days ago, when the Mission was ransacked, and that when news of their capture was brought to Hongkong by a Chinese Christian, who had managed to escape, H.M.S. Seraph was despatched, and, after landing a party, secured the release of the victims. Bishop Valtorta, who formerly served as a missionary in the district, accompanied the naval party.

Two days after the capture of the priests, there were big anti-Christian demonstrations at Swabue in which it is feared that 15 Chinese Christians were killed.

PARTY OF TEN BRUTALLY TREATED.

The first serious incident occurred on Friday last, though on several occasions in the course of the previous ten days, small parties of soldiers, acting apparently on their own initiative, had, raided the Catholic Mission House at Swabue and stolen a certain amount of property.

The Fathers had not regarded such happenings as cause for alarm, but at noon on Friday, when they were preparing to take their mid-day meal, about a hundred soldiers appeared, seized the house, turned the Fathers into a small room, and proceeded to ransack the Mission from top to bottom.

Convent Raided.

The Convent, which housed about 30 girls in addition to the three Italian Sisters and four Chinese Sisters, was next attacked by the "Reds" and the Sisters were forced into the Mission at the point of a rifle.

Protestations by the priests were met by further threats.

That the soldiers were acting under instructions from some high "Red" official was made evident in the afternoon when the doors of the Mission were sealed, and the Fathers were taken away and thrown into a filthy place which might have been a Chinese tea-house. Soldiers were making merry at their expense, and gave them no chance to sleep. Gramophones were played all night and occasionally a soldier would walk across to offer a gratuitous insult. On the way to the tea-house, the priests were spat on and insulted by the crowds.

Threats of Execution.

Father Wong, a Chinese priest, but a British subject, having been born in Hongkong, was separated from Father Robba and Father Bianchi, and thrown into a filthy cell among thirty other people. He was not given food, but the priests were able to purchase some for him with the small amount of money they had been permitted to retain.

It was announced that Father Wong had been sentenced to execution by "the thousand cuts," to take place on Christmas Day, and the priest asked his captors to shoot him instead. Neither idea was, however, carried out.

No indication of the fate proposed for the captives was given on the following day, but they were kept confined in the filthy den, and although not bound or

CANTON CHANGE.

HONAM TROOPS MOVE BACK.

EMPTYING THE TREASURY.

News has been received from Canton to the effect that the 4th Army of the "Ironclads" has left the city and that the return of General Wang Shao-hung, the Kwangsi supporter of Li Chai-sum, will not be opposed. Some of Li Fuk-lum's troops in the city are moving back to Honam.

Despite rumours to the contrary, Canton is still quiet, the troops of the 4th Army having been despatched to the East River district.

A tense situation continues on the East River, and in some quarters it is thought that though outwardly most of the politicians of the Left Wing in Canton have tendered their resignations to the Canton Political Council, some of them have decided that they will concentrate all available troops on the East River, planning a final struggle with the armies of General Chan Chai-tong, an ardent follower of Li Chai-sum.

Much Plotting.

Further, the "Leftists" in Canton had hoped that by further plotting they would be able to persuade General Chan Ming-shiu, whose armies are coming down on the East River, to join hands with them. Chan Ming-shiu is a follower of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek.

To strengthen their position in Canton the "Leftists" recently sought to secure a strong man as an ally in opposing the "Kwangsi Clique," but so far such an alliance has not been effected. But the "Leftists" do not appear to have been discouraged, and have been planning various schemes to permit them to hold Canton. They have sent out propagandists declaring that the Cantonese should support only leaders who are Cantonese themselves, urging that Kwangsi militarists such as General Li Chai-sum and Wang Shao-hung should not be trusted with high positions. In a word, the "Leftists" have desired that the jealousy of troops belonging to General Li Chai-sum and Chan Ming-shiu should be so aroused that the latter might induce his army to fight against Li Chai-sum over the rulership of Canton.

This scheme seems to have fallen through, for it is stated that an agreement or understanding has already been reached between Chan Ming-shiu and Li Chai-sum.

Bank Notes Drop.

As a result of the tension on the West and East Rivers, some uneasiness prevails among the people in Canton, and the value of the Central Bank notes has continued to drop. On Monday morning the notes were worth only 60 per cent. of their face value, while a vernacular report this morning declares that according to a telegram from Canton there has been a further drop to 45 per cent. This is said to be due to the Government requesting the Central Bank to supply the 4th Army with $1,200,000. It is also stated that on Monday the Canton Political Council ordered the Treasury to forward a sum of $800,000 to the 4th Army, part of which was already on the East River.

More Troop Movements.

It is said that a large detachment of the armies of General Fan Sheng-sang, one of the neutrals, now stationed at Shukwan, on the North River, will leave Shukwan for Canton, but whether they will join in the struggles on the West or the East Rivers is not certain.

Fan Sheng-sang was one of the generals appointed by General Li Chai-sum a few months ago to lead the armies into Hunan to attack General Tang Seng-chi of Kupeh and Hunan. Immediately after the "Ironclads" coup at Canton, Fan was appointed by the "Leftist" Government to act as one of the Commissioners of the Canton Military Council, but so far he has not accepted the appointment or declared his policy towards the "Leftists."

NEW SHIPPING WAR LIKELY.

ANGLO-AMERICAN RIVALRY ON JUTE.

U.S. GOVERNMENT'S ACTION.

New York, Dec. 27.

It is believed that the decision of the United States Shipping Board to reduce the cargo rate on jute and burlap bagging from Calcutta to Boston and New York, from 35 to 25 cents per 100 lbs. weight from January 1st, has precipitated a struggle in the shipping industry which may have serious consequences for some of the companies before peace is restored.

The reduction is the result of the inability of the Roosevelt Steamship Company, which operates a fleet of motor ships for the American Government, to reach an agreement with the Cunard, Brockbank and Ellerman groups with regard to the division of the 650,000 tons of jute carried annually from Calcutta to America. The Roosevelt Line demanded the allotment of from sixteen to twenty direct sailings from Calcutta besides its indirect service, but the British lines refused and claimed the major portion of the trade on the ground of their established connections, existing contracts and highly efficient service.

It is intimated that other reductions will follow if necessary to secure what Government officials regard as their proper share of the trade. — Reuter's American Service.

INDIAN POLITICS.

SEVERE BOYCOTT OF COMMISSION.

Madras, Dec. 27.

After three hours' discussion the Indian National Congress unanimously resolved in favour of a severe boycott of the Statutory Commission. An amendment urging the members of the various Legislatures to resign was defeated, and a further resolution declaring that the goal of India was complete national independence was adopted with acclamation. — Reuter.

Liberals' Complaint.

Bombay, Dec. 27. The Liberals' attitude towards the Statutory Commission was voiced to-day by Sir Tej Sapru, presiding at the National Liberal Congress.

He declared that India had not had a fair deal and he urged all parties to join together and draw up a scheme of self-government for presentation to Parliament. His ideal of the future of India was a country of federated States in direct and well-defined relationship with Indian States, under the aegis of the British Crown as an equal member of the British Commonwealth of Nations. — Reuter.

MEXICAN OIL LAW.

AN IMPORTANT AMENDMENT.

Mexico, City, Dec. 27. The House of Representatives has passed the first reading of a Bill sent to the Chamber by President Calles which will have the effect of amending Articles 14 and 15 of the Mexican Oil Regulations in accordance with the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the Mexican Petroleum Company case restraining the cancellation of the Company's drilling permits and declaring invalid the above-mentioned section, whereby all titles to oil lands were forfeited and 50-year concessions substituted for oil land titles acquired before 1917.

The amendment, if passed by Congress, would definitely remove the oil companies' main objection to the oil law since it would abolish such substitution. — Reuter's American Service.

BIG SNOWSTORM.

36-HOUR BLIZZARD AT HOME.

WORST SINCE 1881.

London, Dec. 27.

Snow and sleet fell all night and up till mid-day.

The air service from Croydon to Paris has been cancelled owing to the depth of snow at the Croydon aerodrome, and all stations have been warned that landing at the aerodrome is inadvisable.

Some of the suburban bus services found the snow too deep to start at the scheduled time.

The telephone service to Paris has been cancelled owing to damage to overhead wires in France.

Deep Drifts.

There have been further heavy falls in the South of England, and heavy drifting has continued, depths from 12 to 18 feet being reported as far westward as Devonshire. At many places in the south-east counties, the blizzard continued almost without intermission for 36 hours, and at dawn the scene was unparalleled since the great snowstorm of 1881.

Trains Snowed Up.

The snowstorm was much more disturbing in the country districts than in the towns. Relief engines with snowploughs in many centres took hours to reach stranded trains and were then themselves snowed up. One train which left at three o'clock yesterday afternoon was dug out at six o'clock in the morning.

The southern railways ran "snow trains" all night long to keep the electric conductor rails in working order. Several branch lines have been closed and several villages are isolated by huge snowdrifts.

The Cross Channel services have been suspended to-day owing to the gale. — Reuter.

Heavy Floods Occur.

A sharp frost, following a partial thaw last night, made London streets again dangerously slippery. As a result, L.C.C. ambulances dealt with about 50 cases of accident due to falls.

Meanwhile, the Thames is rising being swollen by melting snows, and is rising hourly.

Great damage has been done by flooding at Canterbury and Maidstone.

The blizzard has now passed to the Continent. Heavy damage by flood and snow is reported from France, Belgium, Spain, Poland and Greece.

A message from Budapest says that many passengers were injured as the result of a goods train colliding with the Budapest-Bucharest express which was held up near Kolozsvár as the result of severe frost affecting the railway lines. — Reuter.

An Earlier Message.

London, Dec. 27. The snowstorm yesterday was the worst Christmas storm since 1886. Drifts many feet deep formed in many districts, and in Yorkshire trains had to be dug out of the snow. Traffic on the roads was often suspended.

There were several lifeboat rescues along the coasts, where the snowstorms were accompanied by heavy weather.

The cross-Channel services were seriously delayed. — Reuter.

POPE'S MESSAGE INTERPRETED.

Rome, Dec. 27.

The Pope's Christmas message to the Sacred College, in which he sorrowed at so much unrest in Russia, China and Mexico, is interpreted as being an exhortation to the Powers to intervene in favour of appeasement. Thus, Britain and France ought to exert pressure on China, and the same countries, with Germany and Poland, should act similarly in connexion with Russia, while the United States is called on to use its influence in Mexico. — Reuter.

SHANGHAI TOPICS.

GAY NIGHT LIFE CRITICISED.

COUNCIL REPRESENTATION.

(Our Own Correspondent.)

Shanghai, Dec. 22.

The scribe's function is to chronicle the events of the day with an eye to truth, without varnish or embellishment. With that in mind, he is bound to record the somewhat dismal fact, much as he would like to have it otherwise, in all conscience, that Christmas, 1927, in Shanghai promises to be, if not actually a Black Christmas, at all events a drab and dreary affair.

Barely has the air been torn with so much strife and contention, both as among Chinese and foreigners themselves, thus bringing about the negation of the very spirit of Christmas, when on earth there should be peace and among men goodwill, what with strikes and vehement newspaper controversies.

Whilst Mr. Edgar Strother and Captain A. N. Howard have revived, with redoubled energy, the question of the so-called "Protocol of the Wise Men of Zion" no sooner after their repudiation by their principal champion in the world, Mr. Henry Ford, another group of residents have rushed into print with letters to the press condemning the life of Shanghai by night, charging that this city reeks with pleasure.

A British peer once stigmatised Shanghai as a "sink of iniquity," and the name somehow has stuck to this International Settlement of ours; and more recently Mr. C. J. Ketchum contributed an article to the London Daily Express in which he asks if Shanghai is the most sinful city on earth, and proceeds to shed a somewhat lurid light on night life in what he calls "the city of a thousand shattered dreams."

When it is remembered that there are no fewer than 52 roulette wheels operating in various parts of the foreign areas, innumerable houses of ill-repute, numerous opium dens and cabarets galore that remain open all night long, it is small wonder that visitors to Shanghai carry away with them disagreeable impressions that find their way into cold print. And these resorts are lavishly patronised by many of Shanghai's "elite." Vice has become respectable; respectability has become vitiated, as one caustic correspondent puts it.

Plight of the Tramless.

If there is evidence of gloom in Shanghai on so many sides, there is also a brighter side to the picture which in no sense should be overlooked. The writer refers to the admirable spirit of helpfulness manifested by many motorists in helping a lame dog over a stile — the lame dog, in this instance, being the unfortunate users of tramcars who, for the past fortnight or more, have been shorn of their principal mode of locomotion, in this city of long distances, owing to the prolongation of the tramway strike far beyond limits hitherto reached in previous disputes between the operatives and the Company.

The alacrity with which owners of motor-cars have responded to the suggestion that tram users be given lifts by passing motorists has belied the oft repeated charge that Shanghaianders are solely engrossed in the pursuit of wealth and are self-centred to the point of callousness and lack of consideration for anyone other than themselves. The sight is becoming common these days of motorists drawing up at the kerb to pick up those, vainly waiting for buses that take long in coming and, when they do come, are packed to overflowing with the hol-poi literally like a tin of sardines. Not a few car owners even go so far as to overcome the natural hesitation of some to take advantage of strangers.

Tragi-Comedy Of The "Red" Expulsion.

One cannot help feeling shocked at the needless rigour which have accompanied the expulsion of the Soviet Consulates in the various areas under Nationalist control. (Continued on Page 4.)

RELIGION AND CHARACTER.

CHINESE Y.M.C.A. LECTURE.

Mr. J. D. Bush gave an interesting address in Chinese at the Chinese Y.M.C.A. on Christmas night on the subject of Religion and Character. He described the social and political reforms in China in recent years as stupendous, but urged that what the Chinese people required was to develop the spirit of unselfish service and sacrifice. He said:

I am asked to address you this evening on the subject of Religion and Character. Before discussing the theme with you, I have to presume that you have already understood the three phases of a man's life, namely, physical, intellectual and religious culture. What a man seeks through his education is to cultivate in himself the physical as well as intellectual power. The physical power you have acquired through healthy sports and wholesome outdoor life. The intellectual vigour you have developed through studying the best that has been thought of and said in the world, and as may be found in the classics or literature and science. I have to assume that you possess a clear apprehension of these two essential processes of development in your life before I venture to speak on religious culture.

Religious Culture.

By this statement, I do not mean to imply that you should think nothing of religion, while you are getting your physical and intellectual training; by no means. In what country you happen to be born, you imbibe more or less imperceptibly from childhood its respective religious education, because religious culture is an essential requisite for every civilisation, from the crudest to the most refined. Notwithstanding all the subtle influence of religion in one's own country, however, it seems that it is human nature to leave all serious thinking about religious culture, until old age and decay come upon oneself. It is like what the old Chinese proverb says, "To embrace Buddha's feet only at the critical moment." Indeed, religious culture comes easy to some, like the opening of eyes to the sun; but to others, it comes with difficulty, only after having encountered hard knocks through the school of experience. There are still others who will never attain any religious culture, because they are spoiled by fortune or befuddled by self-indulgence. These are the people who are doomed to live forever in a fool's paradise. Speaking of the fool's paradise of the rich, I am reminded to tell you of a story of a contented man and a millionaire. Once upon a time, a business man retired to the country with a small competence, and lived in peace and contentment. One day, he met his millionaire friend, and in the course of the conversation, the former said: "My time goes by quite pleasantly. I sleep, I drink, and I eat, I read and meditate, I walk in my neighbours' pleasant fields and see all the varieties of natural beauty. I am a richer man than you are."

"How do you make that out?" asked the millionaire. The other replied, "Why, I have got as much money as I want, and you have not!"

Normally, as a man grows in age, he should acquire more love for sincerity, character and religion. As Emerson says, "Young people admire talents and particular excellences. As we grow older, we value total powers and effects, as the spirit or quality of the man."

Self-Analysis.

As a man grows in age, if he possesses an educated mind, he soon realizes that no matter how excellent an education he may have, it is necessary for him to analyse himself, to make constant tests, to find out whether he is gaining in power, merely standing still, or actually deteriorating. It is very easy for man to become mentally as well as spiritually stagnant. To avoid the mind becoming stagnant, we read and study those books that have stood the test of time, and by virtue of those books, measure our own thoughts and the thoughts of others. But in order to keep the spirit (the higher side of man which we call soul) in tune with the highest good, we need a religion that has the power for awakening, exciting and kindling the inspiration of living emotion in us, necessary to make us obey the rules of moral conduct. We need a religion to keep up the moral enthusiasm of the highest ideal. The raw natural man in us must be refined and transmuted constantly, as the athlete must exercise his muscular limbs on the track from day to day. Religion tells us that, in order to live a good life in the fullest sense, we need to keep in mind the principle of self-analysis.

I may illustrate this principle of self-analysis by telling you a story about a chemist who works in a great water company in the United States. Every day this chemist has to make analysis and tests. He is constantly analysing, apparently, the same water. From day to day there is practically no change in the water; yet the Water Company consider that constant analysis is essential to keep the water that it sells at the highest possible excellence. Similarly, religion should act in us as a chemical analysis of our soul, to see that it is kept as pure and serene as possible.

The chemical analysis of the human soul, of course, is not as simple as the test of water of which I have been telling you. The method varies according to race or country.

Greece said: Be moderate—know thyself.

Rome said: Be strong—order thyself.

Confucianism says: Be superior—correct thyself.

Buddhism says: Be disillusioned—annihilate thyself.

Hinduism says: Be separate—merge thyself.

Mohamedanism says: Be submissive—bend thyself.

Modern Materialism says: Be industrious—enjoy thyself.

Modern Dilettantism says: Be broad—cultivate thyself.

Christianity says: Be Christlike—give thyself.

Philosophy of Love.

Perhaps the question rises in your mind as to which principle of self-analysis demands a higher standard of test, and gives the individual a higher spirit and a finer incentive to attain greater moral excellence. Within the compass of this address, I cannot possibly draw a comparison of the different religions of the world and point out the various ways of looking at life or achieving the passionate search for a good life. I can only tell you what I have experienced. The greatest motive force in Christianity is its philosophy of love. The most vital principle in Christianity is its revelation of the power of pure and unselfish love. The moment a man understands this secret of loving his neighbour as himself, he has arrived at the secret of social and individual well-being; for the two are inseparable.

The man who lives only for himself, can have only a narrow view of the purpose of life. The highest standard of manhood is that of him who knows what it is to work unselfishly and for the good of others. But if a man uses his energy, power or wealth merely for his own ends and his whole object in life is for his personal aggrandisement, he will simply go out of the world small, disquieted and beggared. It is the unselfish action in man, growing slowly into the high habit of devotion, and at last into a sort of consecration, that teaches a man the wide meaning of life and makes him feel that he has played his part well in the world.

I would invite you to read the biographies of the greater men and women in the Christian countries and you will soon understand what it is to be inspired and fired by the teachings of Christ to give themselves in unselfish service to others. It was unselfish devotion that impelled Florence Nightingale to nurse the wounded British soldiers during the Crimean war in 1857. It was Christian spirit of unselfishness and self-sacrifice that moved President Lincoln of the United States to stand up so courageously for the emancipation of the black slaves. It was the Christian philosophy that inspired Livingstone to work so unselfishly for the uplift of the natives in Africa.

No Imperialistic Motive.

The founding of schools and hospitals everywhere in Asia and throughout the world by the Christians surely can not be attributed to the motive of imperialism alone. I daresay humanitarian motive plays equally as great a role. To the man who founded this Institution called the Y.M.C.A. which has contributed so much to the physical and moral well being of the youth all over the globe, cannot be imputed the motive of an imperialistic running dog. He devoted his wealth to the good of the youth in the world because he understood the Christian motive of being helpful to others. It is a great mistake to suppose that the great captains of industry, the great organizers and directors of manufacture and commerce and monetary exchange are intensely absorbed only in the vulgar pursuit of wealth. Their wives and children may squander the wealth that they amass, in foolish and idle ostentation. But many of these great organizers in the United States are themselves in love with the great service they can perform for the uplift of their fellow-men. They are, in short, in love with organizing and overseeing a great part of the life of the world. The beneficence of Rockefeller towards the advancement of medical science also represents the Christian ideal of service for the whole of mankind.

In point of fact, all the humanitarian reforms started in England, like the prison reform, abolition of slavery, the prevention of cruelty to animals, and all the liberalism in English politics, may be traceable to the Christian ideal of loving thy neighbour as thyself. The nucleus of these reforms in one way or another came first from men who were thoroughly imbued with the Christian philosophy of life. An illustration from the life of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, will point the meaning. John Wesley lived in England (1703-1791) at a time when the country was as ignorant and lawless as the politicians have made China to-day. In England of Wesley's time, thefts above the value of 12d. (48 cents) were punishable by hanging. As late as 1773, a woman was strangled and burnt at the stake with 20,000 people looking on. Men, women and children were huddled together in prisons which had no sewers and no water supply. Forty thousand people were engaged in the smuggling trade, and two-thirds of the tea and half the brandy consumed in England did not come under excise. The magistrates were corrupt. The police force was so inadequate and inefficient that footpads robbed carriages right in the heart of London. Riots were frequent in times of scarcity or popular excitement, and even reached an extent that was beyond the control of soldiers.

Now, such social conditions were no doubt as bad as what you see to-day, in Canton and Kwangtung, let us say. Most of us would think that such a disrupted state of affairs in a nation or in a province would appear to be altogether hopeless. And would you believe that a courageous and unselfish Christian reformer like Wesley succeeded in exposing the terrible conditions of social life and creating a new social conscience among the politicians and leaders in England of those days? Politics became more serious. A corrupt magistrate learned to fear a new social force—the social conscience of the English people. Mark you this, I quite realise that the social and political reforms in China are simply stupendous, and for this reason I have cited the example of John Wesley in English history to compare only with the conditions of Canton or Kwangtung of 1927. The parallel thus drawn is both somewhat similar and not unfair to the Chinese mind. Even then, do you suppose that a reformer will rise in the province of Kwangtung within the next few years, who can create a better political and social conscience among the Cantonese people as a whole than what you see today? I leave you to seek an answer for yourselves.

Unselfish Service.

For the moment, I have done my part during this half-hour in telling you that the Chinese people need to develop the spirit of unselfish service and sacrifice which has been crushed by the despotism of ancient China. The chief insistence in Christian philosophy is the need of an inward and spiritual change in man. If a man leads an unselfish life, his soul is unafraid. Be searchingly honest and unselfish with yourself. Search for your own faults rather than to observe the sins of your neighbours. No one in the history of humanity has made the appeal to the human heart and spirit as Christ did in liberating life from the dominations and deceptions of environment and making spiritual values like love and honesty towards your neighbours be the ruling principles of life. The secret of the success is that the spiritual values can be made to achieve so much practical result as I have shown you above in Christian reform and Christian philanthropy.

The conclusion that I wish to draw on the subject of Religion and Character is that no man can live only for himself. Our pleasure and duty in life lie in endeavouring to increase, in the greater or lesser groups to which we belong, the quantity, and, above all, the quality, of life. The two primary instincts of man, according to Laws of Nature, and also according to the teachings of the great Sages of the world, are egoistic and altruistic, or individual and social as it is put in the beginning of this discussion, because the highest good in life is "to help in the expansion and enlargement of other people's lives in order that we may be able to expand and enlarge our own life in like manner." In nature, it is found that trees and animals survive through mutual aid; and among mankind love and kindness play an extremely important part in promoting the development of life. In fine, "by the wise diffusion of an atmosphere of loving kindness we win the hearts and minds of men, so that, as the number of persons having trust in us increases, our power for good will increase as well." This is Christian philosophy. It is also Christian philosophy that every action performed by us, regardless of good or bad, not only has its effect on our own nature, physical, mental and moral, but also reacts directly or indirectly on others. Above all, the expansion of the entire self, which is the aim of life, can only be achieved by mutual aid, union, and co-operation.

A flying field aloft is the U. S. S. Saratoga, viewed from the bow (left, above) as she was formally commissioned at Camden, N. J., as flagship of the United States aircraft fleet. Below, Rear Admiral Julian L. Latimer (left) commandant of the fourth naval district, congratulates Captain Harry E. Yarnell upon his new command. The Saratoga is the biggest vessel ever constructed in America, having a length of 888 feet from end to end of her two-acre flying deck. It can house 83 planes; cost $40,000,000; displaces 33,000 tons and speed through the water at 40 miles an hour. At the right is a stern view of its curious superstructure, which lies entirely to starboard to widen the flying deck. Here you see four of its eight eight-inch guns.

Pawah, sacred white elephant of Burma, being hoisted aboard the Minnehaha at New York. Judging from the laugh-like expression, Pawah was in high feather, because his year of circus work in America was over and he was headed for his distant home.

Oscar Slater (above) has been freed and the charge of murder on which he was imprisoned for 17 years will be dropped following a year's fight on his behalf by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes. Slater, arrested after circumstantial evidence indicated that the slaying of an aged woman in a Glasgow flat was his work, was found guilty and imprisoned. His criminal record also stood against him. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle took up the case a year ago and, using the same methods of deduction and analysis his famous character used in the detective stories, clearly established that Slater could not have committed the crime.

Even at the International Polo Matches at Meadow Brook, Long Island, Helen Wills, although out of her sporting element, starred in the fashion promenade in the paddock between the halves. With her here is Frank Hitchcock, brother of Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., whose playing was a featured of the matches.

No less hazardous than flying across the water was the trans-Atlantic voyage and return to Newport, R. I., of the little sloop Primrose IV whose crew is shown here at the end of the trip. Their sail to England and back, a distance of 4200 miles, was replete with high adventure and danger. In the centre is Frederick Lothrop Ames, wealthy owner of the vessel.

Drifting helplessly on the North Pacific for months, members of the crew of this Japanese fishing schooner became cannibals before they died. Lots were drawn among the twelve to determine those who must die that the others, facing starvation, might live. The schooner finally drifted into Port Townsend, Wash., where the ghastly remains of the ten men and the bodies of the two who had been the last to die, were discovered.

John Quick of Vancouver, B. C., has just celebrated his 107th birthday, and he still keeps busy at a man's job. He is shown here making patterns for women's dresses, while Mrs. Aubrey A. Neef of Seattle, looks on. Mr. Quick was born in 1820 in England.

SHANGHAI TOPICS.

but the revulsion of sentiment thus engendered by the excesses of Chinese officialdom is tempered by the knowledge that the "Reds" themselves initiated their one-time disciples in the ways of brutality and, by an irony of fate, should now be the victims of their own teachings. Viewed in that light, it is difficult these days to extend much sympathy to the apostles of anarchy, who have for three years dislocated that orderly processes of life in this community and who have at last become hoist by their own petard.

Someone gave currency to the rumour that the "Red" Consulate would scarcely be disposed to accept defeat in a meek manner without some attempt to bang the door as they left, and so that community were asked to be quite prepared to see and hear the blowing up of the Consulate building in the wake of the departure of the Russians. A few hypersensitive folks staying at the Astor House Hotel adjoining the Consulate building began to doubt the wisdom or the safety of remaining at the hotel, and one or two hid themselves off to a calmer zone but, mirabile dictu, nothing has happened so far. The building still stands intact, and, what is more, the "Red" flag, emblazoned with the familiar sickle and hammer, still flies, at the time of writing, from the building as if in silent mockery of those who re-sent the sight of the emblem.

The only smoke that has emanated from the building has been not of gunpowder but the wisps of smoke that has curled up to the skies as the final remnants of incriminating documents that have been carefully burned on the eve of the "Red" exodus. And in closing, it is perhaps worth recording that an imaginative member of the Russian "White" organisation in Shanghai had the foresight to send to the departing Soviet Consul a white feather, appropriately accompanied by the sympathies of the Russian emigrants. A Russian journal adds that on receiving this touching gift, the recipient gave a characteristic ejaculation the nature of which may be better imagined than described.

What Of The Future?

The thought that is at the present time uppermost in men's minds is that it is not enough to indulge in feelings of elation at the crushing reverse sustained by the "Reds" but to devise ways and means of placing Sino-foreign relations on a different basis calculated to invest those relations with the elements of permanence and yield abiding benefits to the Chinese and foreign businessmen who are straining their eyes to discern some sign of an improvement on the trade horizon.

Everyone is agreed that things cannot go on as they have been doing for the last three years but that an understanding must be arrived at, at no distant date, so that a trade revival and normal conditions may be restored, to the corresponding advantage of other parts of the country which never fail to react, in a most sensitive manner, to any profound derangement of the economic life of Shanghai.

There is a strong feeling that direct representation for Chinese on the Municipal Council has become a vital necessity if the community is to hurry its footsteps towards peace, progress and reconstruction. The offer of the Council to the Chinese of three seats for nominees selected from among their number still holds good, and it is only to be regretted that, so far, Chinese ratepayers have not seen fit to avail themselves of the offer, which has been made, with the full sanction of the foreign ratepayers, in the right spirit to the end of smoothing away those differences and element of resentment that have so retarded Sino-foreign co-operation.

As the year approaches to its close, however, responsible bodies among the Chinese are giving evidence of recasting many of their views relative to foreigners, and with "Red" tutelage out of the way, there is some prospect of Chinese ratepayers realising that the offer of three seats on the Council is intended to be only the nucleus of Chinese representation on the administrative machinery of the International Settlement and that it is designed to lead to something larger in due course of time.

One important factor that warrants the hope that Chinese during the coming year may feel disposed to accept the proffer of the three seats that are waiting for them is that the Chinese of the French Concession have already accepted the gesture of the Concession authorities in providing places on the French Municipal Council for Chinese members.

Announcement has just been made of the names of five Chinese

ANOTHER CHAPTER.

The situation in Canton is once again undergoing a change, and there is a very widespread hope that it will be a change for the better. It is possible that by the time these lines appear in print, the "Ironsides" will have made a complete withdrawal from the city and their place have been taken by Kwangsi forces loyal to General Li Chai-sum. There was a fear some few weeks ago that the General Chang Fat-kwai and his followers would not yield up Canton without a fight which might easily have produced further destruction and suffering in this ill-starred city. But the latest indications are that the change-over will be peaceful in character, resulting in a restoration of much-needed moderate rule. If that turns out to be the case, then Canton and South China generally will have cause for rejoicing.

There are few cities in China that have undergone worse or more trying experiences during the past few years than Canton. Because of the important position which it occupies as the metropolis of the South, it has been the prey of many contending militarists, whilst its commercial position has been much undermined as a result of Labour and other extremist tyranny. Latterly, the lot of its business people and inhabitants generally has been a truly terrible one, and the hope that Canton may be spared anything like a repetition of the recent tragic occurrences is one that will be shared by Chinese and foreigners alike. Some two months or so ago, there was a widely prevalent feeling that at long last Canton was to enjoy an era of peace and relative prosperity, accompanied by freedom from political extremism and labour fanaticism. Unhappily, there were evil influences at work behind the scenes, and the work of the extremists was seen in due course. As events have turned out, however, the momentary seizure of control by Communists has proved to be a blessing in disguise, for the developments which ensued had the effect of opening the eyes of the people to what "Red" rule really was. Moreover, the discovery that the Soviet Consulate was being utilized as the base of revolutionary and Communist activity caused even the "Ironsides" to realize that the Russians were no real friends of the Chinese. General Chang Fat-kwai, and his subordinates have endeavored to get themselves taken at their own estimation as the opponents of ultra-"Red" rule, but popular opinion, plus pressure from the Kwangsi troops, has brought them to a recognition of the fact that they can no longer hold down the situation. Hence their hurried exit before the return of the moderates.

We know that we are speaking for the preponderant mass of Chinese and foreigners alike when we voice the hope that Canton will soon settle down to well-ordered rule. There is a great future for this city and Kwangtung generally, provided a stable Government is once in control. Canton has suffered so much in recent years that she badly needs a period of restfulness in order that her scars may be healed. If General Li Chai-sum can but get firmly settled in and make a start in the great task of restoration and reconstruction which cries out for attention, then the people of South China will have cause to praise his name. And in no place more so than in Hongkong will he and his supporters be shown a greater measure of sympathy in the work which lies ahead.

Indian Reforms.

It is with regret that we learn that the Indian National Congress is determined to carry on its campaign of non-co-operation in connexion with the labours of the Indian Statutory Commission, for such a decision means that the Commission will have to carry out its work without the active support of what is a preponderant section of Indian political opinion. Dr. Ansari, in his presidential address at Madras on Boxing Day, urged that a round table conference between Indian and British plenipotentiaries was the only way in which Indians could co-operate with Britain regarding the settlement of India's future, but Dr. Ansari knows perfectly well that he is thereby proposing a set of circumstances which does not and cannot yet exist. The Commission's duty is to enquire into the working of the political reforms under the Government of India Act and to outline, if considered opportune, the line on which such reforms might be extended. If the Indian Nationalists do not consent to co-operate in that enquiry they will be throwing away a great opportunity to guide and influence further reforms. Ever since the composition of the Commission was announced the boycott movement has been vigorously worked up in the Indian press. Huge protest meetings have been held in Calcutta and Bombay, the latter being notable for the strong speeches made. Indian Liberals are now also opposing the Commission. On the other hand, the Indian business men of Bombay have condemned the boycott, and it is anticipated that the various Moslem organisations will refuse to follow the aggressive lead of the Nationalists. Pundit Motilal Nehru, the leader of the Swarajists in the Indian Legislative Assembly, has recently been in London stimulating Labour hostility to the Commission and everything connected with it, and when the Bill, enabling the appointment of the Commission to take place earlier than was originally provided, came before the House of Commons a small group of Labour members broke away from their leader (Mr. Ramsay MacDonald who supported the Bill) and opposed the passage of the measure. It is a pity that the task of bringing about Indian reforms is thus made so difficult.

The wedding is to take place on January 3rd of Miss Ngai Ling Chee, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ngai Bong Ping of 3 Lower Castle Road, to Mr. Lee Shiu Kee. Mr. Ngai Bong Ping was formerly Commissioner of Police at Canton, and the bridegroom is the brother of Mr. Lee Shiu Kai who recently married the eldest daughter of the Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall, C.M.G. He is at present studying medicine.

LOCAL WEDDING.

ORGANIST OF ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

A wedding of much local interest took place at St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon, this afternoon, when Mr. Rupert Baldwin, who is the organist at the church, was married to Miss Winifred Edith Andrews, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Andrews, of Sheerness, Kent. The bridegroom is the youngest son of Mr. C. Baldwin, M.B.E., and Mrs. Baldwin, also of Sheerness.

There was a large attendance at the church, the ceremony being performed by the Vicar, the Rev. W. Walton Rogers. The bride, who was given away by Mr. C. C. Mitchell, wore a dress of white georgette and veil with silk embroidery, and a coronet of orange blossom. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaids, the Misses Peggy and Betty Jeffreys, wore dresses of pale blue crepe-de-chine, trimmed with Ecru lace, and cream Ecru lace Dutch caps. They carried baskets of pink and white roses and sweet peas.

Mr. J. W. Baldwin carried out the duties of best man. The service was choral, Miss F. McGill presiding at the organ.

At the conclusion of the ceremony a reception was held in St. Andrew's Church Hall, after which the newly-married couple left for the Bungalow, Shatin, where the honeymoon is being spent. The bride's going away dress was a beige costume, with hat to match.

MOORING INSHORE.

BOATMASTER FINED.

At the Marine Court this morning before Commr. G. F. Hole, eight masters and mistresses of cargo boats were charged with mooring their craft inside low water mark on the night of December 26.

Of the eight accused, six pleaded guilty and two not guilty, the latter stating that they had been arrested at 9 p.m. and not later than that hour.

The prosecuting officer gave evidence to the effect that the boats were secured to the Praya wall between Wing Lok Street Wharf and the Hoi On Wharf and the arrest was not made until 10.15 p.m. This was corroborated by the coxswain of Police Launch No. 7.

The defendants stated that they had taken passengers from the Tai Fook Sing and were about to leave the Praya when arrested. They left the vessel at 8 p.m. and were leaving the shore at 9 p.m.

In view of the fact that the seventh defendant, who had pleaded not guilty, admitted a previous conviction in November last for a similar offence, he was fined $10 with the alternative of 10 days' imprisonment, the remainder being mulcted in $5 each, with the usual alternative.

A VILLAGER'S RIFLE.

ELDERLY CHINESE FINED.

An elderly Chinese, of Kau Pa Kang village, was charged before Mr. W. Schofield, at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, with being in possession of a Winchester rifle and 109 rounds of ammunition without a permit from the Captain Superintendent of Police.

The defendant pleaded guilty. Inspector Fallon, prosecuting, said he raided the defendant's house yesterday morning and found two bags containing ammunition. The accused was asked if he possessed a rifle for the ammunition and he told the police that he did not. In a subsequent search, however, the Winchester was found behind some furniture.

The defendant previously worked as a "boy" on one of the President boats, but was not at present in employment.

Asked why he had not applied for a permit, the defendant said he only bought the arms two months ago and had been very busy since.

Further questioned, he said he had purchased the rifle and ammunition from a man who had visited his village. He was unable to state whether the vendor was a smuggler or not.

A fine of $500 was imposed.

CASHIER'S THEFT.

SIX MONTHS TERM INFLICTED.

Six months' hard labour was imposed by Major C. Willson, this morning, on the Chinese who was charged with the theft of $3,080.44 from the Ho Hong Bank on October 2nd.

Mr. M. K. Lo, who prosecuted on behalf of the Bank, asked his Worship to deal leniently with the defendant, who was a cashier at the Bank.

In his recent book Mr. Maude tells how Sir Charles Wyndham insisted on bringing a little dog to every rehearsal of "Money" given at a gala performance in honour of the Kaiser's visit to London in 1911.

One day Tree Irene Vanbrough and I were standing watching the little dog, and I said:—"I suppose you know that little dog has been trained by Lady Wyndham to watch over Sir Charles, and in case he speaks longer to any particular lady than he ought, the little dog gets hold of him by the ankle just to remind him of Lady Wyndham."

They both laughed, and then Irene looked up sweetly into Sir Herbert's face and said, "And do tell me, Sir Herbert, has Lady Tree trained a little dog to watch over your goings on?" Tree gazed up at the rafters of Drury Lane Theatre and, stroking his locks, said, "Ah—it died from want of sleep."

In his book, "Behind the Scenes with Cyril Maude," Mr. Cyril Maude relates a story of a butcher who was unable to pronounce the name of a relative of Mr. Maude's, Lord Maghermorne. The peer had only recently got his new title, having before been Sir James McGarel-Hogg.

A report was made last night at 9 p.m. by Mr. Boxer residing at the London Mission house at No. 6B Robinson Road, to the effect that a Chinese broke into his room by climbing through the verandah door. The man was observed by a European lady living in an adjoining house, in the act of carrying away some of Mr. Boxer's clothing. The lady grappled with the robber, who, however, managed to give her the slip.

GREATER AIR SPEED.

IS THERE A MECHANICAL LIMIT?

YEAS AND NAYS.

"Impossible" is a word which should be used with extreme caution when discussing aviation, says the Observer's Air Correspondent. The speeds attained in this year's race for the Schneider Cup are certainly not the limit even on present lines of design, and already it is possible to foretell new lines of development, which will be followed provided there be sufficient inducement.

In the past two years the increase of speed has exceeded most expectations. The reasons, in a few words, are:—
Decrease in the resistance-area of the engine;
Increase of power without increase of weight;
Further refinement in aeroplane construction reducing resistance;
Wings which despite small area afford the lift necessary for a landing speed not exceeding about 90 miles per hour;
The discovery that pilots can endure it;

the successful employment of a geared engine for the first time in "high-speed" racing craft, enabling a propeller of greater efficiency to be used. The British type which was victorious at Venice is certainly capable of a speed of 365 miles per hour; and it will ere long establish a world record over the three-kilometre distance. But without any radical alterations, and by merely screwing up to a higher pitch and refining here and there, it is estimated that in next year's race it should be capable of about 340 miles per hour, and of flying the many-cornered Schneider Cup course at about 320 m.p.h. That may or may not represent the limit on present lines; whilst all the world is wondering whether far greater speeds—400, or even 500 miles per hour—may not in the near future be attained.

Pilot Lying Down.
At present the three-kilometre absolute speed record of aircraft is taken near ground level, where the air is comparatively dense. The principal obstacle to increase of speed is the enormous resistance offered by the air. This resistance, (to use a mathematical expression) increases as the square of the velocity. Some idea of the effect of this law may be obtained from the fact that in 1925 and 1926, for the addition of 280 h.p., an increase of speed by only 12 miles per hour was obtained in seaplanes of the Schneider Cup class. This year, however, with the addition of only 10 or 12 h.p. the speed went up by a further 24 miles. The reasons have already been indicated.

The cross-section, or resistance area, of the body of the machine is determined in these high-speed craft as much by the size of the pilot as by the girth of the engine. This will constitute the principal hampering item until machines without floats or wheels can be considered (as they may be for the big races of 1929 and 1930).

Not next year, but afterwards, it is not impossible that instead of engines with the cylinders set V-shape, "broad arrow," or cruciform (like the American Packard) an engine with the cylinders "in line" may be produced. If the cylinders of such an engine do not protrude unduly, a much slenderer fuselage would be possible were it not for the need to find a place for the pilot. But already there is talk of accommodating the pilot, not in a sitting, but a half-reclining position. Such an innovation would have to be made with caution, for at high speeds it might have a disabling effect upon his faculties.

Limit of Engine-power.
On the whole, it is difficult to see how very much greater speeds at ground level than 340 miles per hour will be attainable even in racing aircraft, for always the alighting speed must be provided for, and with that, at about 90 miles per hour the design of the aeroplane must be such that there is strong tendency restricting the maximum speed. Probably, however, we shall see some countries risking landing speeds of 100 or even 110 miles per hour, and sacrificing life to them.

Probably nothing is to be gained by mere piling on engine-power, for it seems inevitable that little more can be done without increase of weight, which, in turn, demands larger wings, whilst the greater resistance of bigger engines and bodies would have to be overcome.

At very high altitudes the problem is different. At 40,000 ft. the density of the air is only about a quarter of that at ground level. At such an altitude, therefore, the resistance of the air is but a small obstacle to the attainment of great speed; indeed, the machine must fly faster in order to be supported by the air. The supercharge to the engine enables the power to be maintained in spite of the WAR CLAIMS.

£91,000,000 PAID OUT LAST YEAR.

London, Dec. 27.
The work of clearing the office dealing with claims against enemy states and subjects is nearing completion.

The report of the Controller for the year ending October 1 last shows that a total of £91,000,000 was paid to claimants, of which £84,000,000 was in respect of claims against German Nationals and the German Government. Altogether 424,000 British and ex-enemy claims have been submitted for a total of £244,000,000. 279,000 claims were admitted and 138,000 withdrawn or rejected, while 6,000 claims for a total of £8,855,000 are outstanding.—Reuter.

NORTHERN WAR.

FENG TIEN EFFORT TO BUY CHOCHOW.

Peking, Dec. 27.
According to foreign reports the Southerners are still 30 ft south of Hanchuang and it is believed that the Kuomintang have not yet occupied Tsinan. The Cabinet states that Feng Yu-hsiang heavily attacked Tsinan a few days ago but was repulsed. All is quiet there now. Chang Chung-chang and Sun Chuan-fang, it is reported, consider that the Southerners are not likely to advance northward at the present time, hence they are sending Chihli-Shantung reinforcements, consisting of two "armies," to Tsinan.

Negotiations are going on for the Shansi evacuation of Chochow. It is believed that Fengtien will pay the Shansi-ites for the surrender and also pay the townfolk for the damages done during the siege.—Reuter.

poverty of the air; the pilot can wear electrically heated clothing, and can be artificially supplied with the oxygen necessary to maintain life; the machine could even have a closed cabin in which temperature, air density, and oxygen could be maintained at life-sustaining conditions.

Eight Miles a Minute.
It may not be impossible to attain a speed of 500 miles per hour at great altitudes; but, an exact forecast is difficult, for the calculations must take into account the necessity for providing a safe landing speed and for the carriage of the complicated apparatus or cabin. For flying from ground level to the great altitudes provision must be made against the great range of conditions.

If one imagines a Schneider race at an altitude of eight miles or so, the question of observable turning points is raised. Naturally a longer course than the present one of 185 miles (consisting of a small triangle flown many times) would have to be adopted. But there seems to be no particular inducement to spend the immense amount of money needed for research into flying at heights of seven or eight miles. In all probability rather will there be developments more or less along present lines, and the Schneider and other high-speed races will be altered as to conditions. In order to add to high speed such practical qualities as a reasonable landing speed. The conditions of the Schneider race cannot be altered drastically for the coming year; but the ruling body may reconsider the matter for the year after next.

SHARE SWINDLE.

REWARDS OFFERED BY F.M.S. POLICE.

Penang, Dec. 14.

Penang brokers who are affected by the recent share swindle have resolved to obtain the opinion of Messrs. Braddell Bros., regarding the banks' responsibility, and the companies' position for permitting the issue of scrip which can easily be forged.

The F.M.S. Police, says the Malay Mail, offer a reward of $1,000 to any person, or will apportion it amongst persons, who will give information:

(a) leading to the definite establishment of the identity of the person or persons who at Klang on July 18 last took possession of Post Box No. 46, registered in the name of Ng Gim It.

(b) leading to the establishment of the identity of the person or persons who took delivery of letters from Post Box 46, Klang, registered in the name of Ng Gim It.

(c) leading to the establishment of the identity of the person who cashed at the Kwong Yik Bank cheques for various amounts, drawn by Ng Gim It, for the purpose of facilitating fraud.

In connexion with the offer of a reward of $5,000, it is stated that half of this reward will be paid to the person, or apportioned amongst the persons, who will give information leading to the definite establishment of the identity of the person signing himself as Ng Gim It; or the whole will be paid to anyone giving information leading to his capture and arrest.

This offer of reward holds good for a period of three months from to-day. The identity of informants will not be disclosed.

The police are anxious to obtain information concerning a grey, almost new, Austin Twelve car, owner-driven by a well-dressed Chinese, and bearing, it is believed, a four-figure number plate. Anyone who has seen this car, in the neighbourhood of Kuala Lumpur or Klang during the past two months is requested to communicate with the police without delay. Printer's Clerk Charged.

The young Chinese printer's clerk named Ng Mong Tou, who was arrested in Kuala Lumpur on suspicion in connexion with the share scrip swindle, was produced before Mr. J. L. McFall in the Kuala Lumpur Police Court and charged with aiding and abetting the offence of cheating. The hearing of the case was postponed pending further investigations by the police.

REALLY GOOD NEWSPAPER STORY.

AND ODDS AND ENDS.

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 15.

At last a real honest-to-gosh newspaper story is to be brought to the screen. Scores of newspaper yarns have been filmed in this village of make-believe but newspaper men are still waiting for the first picture that will ring true.

Their wish probably will be gratified by "The Headliner," which Allen Dwan has just started out at the First National lot. The story is written by Ben Hecht. For years, Hecht was one of Chicago's foremost newspaper writers. And the story is being adapted for the screen by Tom Geraghty, who spent many years on New York papers.

There won't be any cub reporter who in the final sequences "scoops" all of the old timers on a big story and then marries the boss daughter. Instead "The Headliner" goes behind the scenes and shows the true workings and power of the press.

Following closely on the heels of "The Headliner" will come another so-called newspaper film from the DeMille lot. This production is Richard Harding Davis' "Gallagher" with 9-year-old Junior Coghlan in the featured role. Nothing need be said about its merit. But see both pictures—and then do your own judging.

The coming winter months are going to be rather gloomy for filmland's history merchants unless something is done to kill the bare leg fad. Even the cool days and nights of late have failed to bring forth the silk covering for legs.

Celluloid is so full of the dumb and near-dumb that it is just as pleasurable to meet an actor who actually talks intelligently. George Fawcett, who was a favourite on the stage for years before he migrated to Hollywood, is one of the latter group. Fawcett has forgotten more about literature, psychology and a few subjects of that nature than most of movie town's population will ever know.

Just Wandering About.

Ben Lyon coming out of his hotel with Hal Howe... Ben just back from Europe a few weeks ago and he's started to work already... Estelle Taylor driving toward First National... It's the first time in months she has been seen at the wheel of her car... a hungry looking actor... who probably hasn't worked a day in many weeks... this winter will be tough on the extras... especially with some of the studios shutting down for a couple of months.

Dorothy Herzog, one of movie's few clever writers, going into the Montmartre... she's one of Eddie's best customers... a couple of "rue" men standing on a corner discussing a murder plot... while a nearby cop eyes them suspiciously... Will Rogers riding with Mayor Croyer of Los Angeles... wonder if he's giving him some tips on how a city should be mayored... Will should know. Louise Fazenda and Hal Wallis slipping to an out of the way eating place... if they don't get married soon, Hollywood will lose all interest in their wedding. The Fox studios... occupying some acres on both sides of Western avenue... it's pretty expensive property for a movie studio... the house-like structure is the eating office where scores of extras line up every afternoon for their pay checks... inside the gate... much activity... Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell hard at work... they seem to like playing together... Victor McLaglen talking over his next story with Raoul Walsh... Olive Borden in a pretty new costume... Eugene O'Brien just back from a vacation the noon whistle... and outside again for lunch... all of them very attractive... each with an eye on stardom for which she would make nearly any sacrifice... but few, if any, will ever reach their goal... a strange town, this place called Hollywood... hundreds fall... and then an unknown suddenly flashes across the cinema heavens... there is an old saying here... don't kick at the office boy, he may be general manager to-morrow... that's the way the movie industry functions... Charlie Chaplin strolling alone... perfectly unconscious of what is going on about him... he often smooths out the rough spots in his stories this way... many actors have tried to "ape" this genius... but all have dropped by the roadside... there is only one Charlie Chaplin... and never can be another.

SCULLING.

BARRY WINS THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP.

Vancouver, Dec. 27.

In the world's sculling championship, H. A. Barry of England beat Major Goodsell of Australia, the holder, by six lengths in 21 minutes 4 seconds.

Later.

Bert Barry won in ten, not six lengths, over a course of three miles. —Reuter's American Service.

It will be remembered that Goodsell and Barry met at Vancouver on September 5, when Goodsell retained his title over the three miles course, beating Barry by ten lengths. The English sculler has now turned the tables.

Barry is 25 years of age and is a nephew of Ernest Barry, who held the title for several years before the war. He is reputed to be an even better sculler than Ernest, whose best time over the Putney-Mortlake course was 21 mins. 27 secs. H. A. is a son of W. A. Barry, who was champion of England in 1898.

Previous Winners.

THE PRINCE AS AN APPRENTICE.

WAS AT THE BOTTOM OF THE CLASS.

HIS MOTORING MOTTO.

Tributes to the progress of the British motor car industry were made in Glasgow recently by the Prince of Wales, who attended two motoring functions in the course of a busy day of engagements.

The Prince performed the opening ceremony in connexion with the Scottish Motor Trade Show in Kelvin Hall in the afternoon, and in the evening he was the guest at the dinner of the Royal Scottish Automobile Club.

The Prince, it was announced, has become a patron of the Royal Scottish Automobile Club.

Intimation of the "signal honour" as he termed it, was made by Lord Weir at the Club dinner. Turning to the Prince, his Lordship said:—Ex-officio you sir, thus become a full member of our Club. Please accept the badge of the Club, with the wish that for all our sakes, you will adhere to the motto—"Gang warily." (Great laughter.)

"Going Ahead."

The Prince said it was a source of great satisfaction to all that any way some of the industries of this country were at least going ahead after a bad slump. Conservation in industry could be overdone, and especially in the automobile industry.

I was glad to-day, he added, to see innovations, both in engine and body design for both motor cars and commercial motor vehicles. Particularly I was glad to see the fine efforts that are being made to reduce the selling prices of your products, and bringing them within the purchasing range of a very much larger proportion of the community.

The progress that the industry had made in 30 years since the earliest cars, which had by law, to be preceded by a man with a red flag, to the finished article on the market, now could best be summed up in this way—the man with the red flag would not have a hope if he tried to precede that breaker of world's records and that sportsman, Major Seymour. Of the same order was our victory only a month or two back in the Schneider Cup race.

That great victory was, after all, only made possible by experience and research gained originally in the automobile field.

Advice to Exporters. Proceeding, the Prince said he did not presume to advise or criticise their great industry, the little help his presence might have was principally on account of his position.

It is true many years ago, continued His Royal Highness, I was a naval cadet and for four years I served almost a workshop apprenticeship. I was very keen, and sometimes worked fairly hard on the practical side, but at the end of every term I was quite mortified to find I was always bottom, or nearly so, of my term—(laughter)—but can claim to have travelled, and I hope with my eyes open. (Cheers.)

So if he did not know the complexities of any single industry he had had many opportunities of observing for himself the impression our manufactured articles made

HOME RUGBY.

SCOTLAND BEAT THE WARRATAHS.

London, Dec. 17.

At Murrayfield there was a very large attendance for the Scotland-Warratahs match and the game proved a close one, played very fast throughout. The home side led by six points to five at half time and won by ten to eight.

At Twickenham, for the England vs. the Rest match, there was only a small attendance of 3,000, probably due to the doubts as to whether there would be any play, but the ground had been protected against the frost and the match came off.

The Rest led at half time by 8 points to 5 but in the second half England improved and a close finish was seen, England winning by 10 to 18.

The Corinthians met the Navy at soccer and drew with them at 3 all.

Sussex Beat Kent.

The following are the results of matches played to-day:
E.N.C. (Greenwich) 5, Army Trial XV. 2.
Devon 3, Royal Navy 11.

In a County Championship match Sussex beat Kent by 14 points to 12, at Hastings.

Nippon Eleven to Tour England. Tokyo, Dec. 20.

The Rugby football team of Keio University, Tokyo, will invade England for a series of games next year, according to reports in the vernacular newspapers.

This will be the first time a Japanese Rugby team has ever visited England.

MANILA GOLFERS.

TO VISIT HONG KONG NEXT MONTH.

Returning the visit of the members of the Royal Hongkong Golf Club of a short time ago, a picked team of Manila golfers will leave for Hongkong soon after the Philippine Open, which will be held next month, says the Manila Times.

The meeting in Hongkong will be the seventh of the annual interport series, the last of which was won by Manila on the Calocan links. Bobby Mason, Philippine open champion, who captained the victorious team of 1927, will probably head the delegation to China. Other players mentioned as being qualified to carry the Manila attack are Captain J. K. Fielder, U.S.A.; Lieut. J. Cranston, U.S.A.; E. J. Nell, George Ivory, and Ben F. Few.

The standing in the interport series is now even, with each city having won three events. Manila has never been able to overcome the Hongkong golfers on their home course, and the British have been equally unsuccessful at Calocan.

The selection of the team for the Hongkong matches will not be affected by the result of the Philippine Open.

overseas in the Dominions, the Colonies, and in foreign countries. Their export trade had enormous possibilities. It was up to all in the automobile industry to get down to it and discover the best way of proving the article that was wanted overseas. (Cheers.)

Lord Weir said His Royal Highness was one of the few who had the wisdom and courage to remind us not of our inefficiency, but of our capacity and our possibilities. To provide us with the salutary and healthy antidote to the pessimists and deprecators of our time.

INTERESTING MOTOR PROSECUTION.

LOCAL DOCTOR FINED FOR SPEEDING.

THE RED TRIANGLE.

The weekly hearing of traffic cases at the Magistracy, postponed until this morning, was held before Mr. R. E. Lindsell.

Dr. S. Seguin Strahan, of Alexandra Buildings, was summoned for driving recklessly and speeding in a manner dangerous to the public at Caine Road on the 16th instant.

In view of the new ruling that the actual defendant must be named and that he must answer the summons in person, Dr. Strahan was asked by the Bench if he claimed to answer the summons as the person actually driving the car at the time.

Dr. Strahan replied in the affirmative, and evidence was then proceeded with.

Traffic Sergeant S. C. Saunders stated that at 1.50 p.m. on the 16th instant, he was riding his motorcycle along Caine Road in an easterly direction from the Police Quarters. Near the Ladder Street junction, a car, driven by the defendant, came up from behind and overtook him.

Road Blocked.

Witness was going at 15 miles an hour, and to overtake him defendant must accelerate, and drive at a speed of at least 20 miles an hour. To overtake witness, defendant had to swerve completely to the right-hand side of the road, thus blocking up the entire width of the road for any vehicle that might be approaching from the opposite direction. Witness viewed it as an exceptionally dangerous case. He endeavored to pass and stop defendant, but was not able to do so until they reached Government House. Defendant's speed between Ladder Street and Government House varied between 25 and 28 miles an hour.

When at length witness was able to stop the car at Government House, he told Dr. Strahan that he proposed to summon him. Defendant replied that he had no time to attend the Police Court. He also argued a little as to whether he was going fast or otherwise, saying that he did not see any danger in the way he drove. Witness could not remember defendant's exact words, but he understood that defendant maintained that his driving was not in any way dangerous.

Dr. Strahan—I should like to ask the Sergeant whether it was not a fact that he cut across the road at the Police Quarters at about 20 miles an hour in front of my car.

Witness:—Yes, my speed on coming out of the Police Quarters could not be more than 10 miles an hour.

Dr. Strahan:—But you accelerated in order to get in front of me.

His Worship:—Did you cut across the road in front of the car?

Right of Road.

Witness replied that by the time he got out on the roadway from the Police Quarters, Dr. Strahan had hardly passed the Indian on point duty at the junction of Hospital Road, and by the time witness got on the proper side of the road there was still a gap of at least 20 yards between his cycle and defendant's car.

Dr. Strahan:—I remember I had to slow down in order to let the Sergeant get in front of me. I consider I had the right of the road but he wished to get in front of me, compelling me to slow down.

Dr. Strahan then said that he was entitled to pass the Sergeant by virtue of this right of the road, and suggested that the whole summons was due to the Sergeant being annoyed with him, because witness passed him.

His Worship pointed out that "two wrongs did not make a right" and that defendant should not have attempted to pass the Sergeant by speeding up in the way alleged. In any case, he (defendant) should have slowed down in that control area.

In reply to his Worship, Inspector Alexander stated that the whole of that length of Caine Road was within the control area where cars were not allowed to be driven at more than 15 miles an hour.

Dr. Strahan:—When I asked the Sergeant he told me that the control speed was not more than 20 miles. I did not know that I was in a control area, and the public could not have known if the police themselves didn't.

Sergeant Saunders said that Dr. Strahan had misunderstood him. What he said was that although the speed was limited to 15 miles an hour in that area, the police generally did not take action in cases where that speed was exceeded up to 20 miles.

Red Triangle.

Inspector Alexander pointed out that there was a red triangle put

KIUKIANG PLOT.

ANTI-BRITISH MOVE FAILS.

PETTY OFFICER'S ACTION.

Kiukiang, Dec. 15.

During the past fortnight in Kiukiang there has been a marked revival of anti-foreign agitation. Every opportunity has been seized to fan the flame of popular excitement, but up to the present, it seems that the agitators have met with little success, except in the army.

Chinese soldiers have a habit of commandeering "junks" right and left when in need of transport accommodation. At Kiukiang, they can do this anywhere they like, except between the two British hulks, as the junks at the hulks either are loaded with cargo for British steamers or are waiting to receive cargo from British steamers. This is a rule which has been established all through the summer and generally it has been observed by the Chinese army. However, about ten days ago a Chinese officer with an armed party marched down to the ex-Concession foreshore and began to commandeer boats at the British hulks. He sent a soldier off to the first junk at hand, but the Petty Officer of the naval guard on the hulk, observing this, sent two men off to inform the soldier of the established regulation.

The soldier apparently was obstreperous and it became necessary to disarm him, a small formality which was carried out without difficulty. The Chinese officer on shore seems to have disappeared because he ordered his men to kneel down, load their rifles and aim at the two sailors in the junk, seeing which, the N.C.O. of the guard on the hulk likewise ordered his men to aim at the kneeling soldiers on the foreshore. This was too much for the latter gentlemen and they rose to their feet and faded away.

Loss of Face.

The Chinese soldiers considered that they had "lost face" over the incident and, unable to annoy the sailors, they retaliated on the unfortunate owner of the junk. He was fined $160 and is said still to be held prisoner. The head hulk coolie also was accused of having drawn the attention of the naval guard to the commandeering which was in progress and was fined $2,000. Provided contributions reach the military coffers, we are not very particular in Kiukiang how they get there. The head coolie eventually bought his release for $1,000 cash in silver. Head coolies on the shipping hulks are wealthy men in these days.

It happened at about the same time that the smuggling of salt became so bad, no less than six junkloads of "pidgin" cargo contraband salt being filled from one steamer only, that the Navy were requested to take steps to put a stop to the traffic. This undoubtedly caused considerable dissatisfaction to all the gentry who make a living by handling "pidgin" cargo and an agitation was started against the naval men. On the morning of December 9, an attempt was made by a gang of loafers to rush the approach to the hulk. This easily was frustrated, but in the ensuing melee several coolies acquired sore heads.

The Inevitable Communists.

The disgruntled military immediately saw their opportunity and commenced an anti-British agitation. There is very little doubt, also, that there has been some Communist direction behind the agitators. The shipping coolies were forced out on strike against their wishes, as they are making too much money to be able to afford to strike, and, moreover, the present from their point of view, is a bad time to stop work, as they wish to make a little extra money against the approaching Chinese New Year.

The reorganized committee of the local department of the Kuomintang (Hsih Tang Pu) and the Political Bureau of the 4th Army Route have taken an active part in the agitation. Every day for the past week, the local newspaper has been filled with vituperative articles attacking the British. The sailors have been accused of stealing money from the coolies, of stabbing them with their bayonets and of shooting them with rifles. All of which is untrue. Not a shot has been fired and, apart from some abrasion of the cuticle, not a coolie injured.

Gross Misrepresentation.

The posters are much worse than the articles published in the newspapers. The native town has been plastered with them and the least objectionable read:—"Strike Down the British Imperialists." On Sunday, the 11th, the poster campaign spread to the ex-Concession, until an irate foreigner, who found soldiers sticking posters on the doors of the British Consulate itself, seized the paste-bucket and poured its contents over the soldier bill-sticker.

CHRISTMAS NIGHT TRAGEDY.

STUDENT CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.

BAIL OF $1,000.

Lo Chi-hing, a student of St. Paul's College, was charged this morning, before Major C. Willson, with the manslaughter of Ho Kwong-hoi, another student of the same College.

As reported yesterday, a scuffle took place in the Club of the China Athletic Association in China Building on December 25th between the defendant and the deceased, and it is alleged that the defendant struck the deceased a blow, which later caused death.

Mr. L. D. Turner appeared for Lo Chi-hing. The prosecution was conducted by Sub-Inspector Lane.

Mr. Turner informed his Worship that his instructions were to apply for bail and a remand.

The prosecution indicated that there would be no objection to reasonable bail.

Mr. Turner:—I am prepared to pay $1,000, accompanied by a surety of an equal amount.

The Magistrate eventually fixed bail at $1,000 cash, and adjourned the case for a week.

It is interesting to note that the defendant is well-known in Chinese sporting circles as a powerful swimmer and is one of the best exponents of the breast stroke in Hongkong. In the Harbour race organised by the South China Bathing Club this year, Lo finished second out of 62 competitors.

HONGKONG MERCHANT'S ESTATE.

A MINOR TO BENEFIT.

Hongkong estate to the value of $18,800 was left by Lo Yee-kwan, alias Lo Chi-kwan, alias Lo Ching, a merchant of Hongkong, who died at the Tung Wah Hospital on January 23rd this year.

The will directs that everything be left to Lo Shing-fook, a minor, whose mother, Lo Chu-shi, has been granted limited Letters of Administration with the will annexed until the minor reaches the age of 21.

TIRED OF LIFE.

ACED MAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

In an attempt to commit suicide, a Chinese sixty years of age, residing at No. 67, Wo Sang Street, took a large dose of opium yesterday.

The old man's sufferings following the taking of the drug, were observed by other inmates of the house who caused him to be removed to the Kwong Wah Hospital, where, after preliminary attention, he was transferred to the Kowloon Hospital. His condition is still serious.

After that the Chinese officials were notified that no more posters were to be put up in the ex-Concession and such posters as were already up were torn down by a party of sailors sent ashore for the purpose.

On the same day, the Hsih Tang Pu issued orders for a monster meeting to be attended by all coolies. The meeting was duly held, but the revolutionary enthusiasm has died out of the masses and few coolies attended. The subsequent procession was almost entirely made up of soldiers and small boys. Apart from the fact that they do not wish to strike, the coolies have not forgotten the fate of those who were recently executed for their connexion with the Hsih Tang Pu, before it was reorganized.

For the past two days, rumours have been afloat that the coolies intend to flout the authority of the Hsih Tang Pu and return to work. The Hsih Tang Pu has made an effort to collect funds to pay the coolies strike pay. In this morning's Chinese paper, a list of organizations who have been "ordered" to subscribe is given, the amount to be raised being $6,000. Amongst the proposed subscribers it appears that the Opium Suppression Bureau is the wealthiest. Amongst others appear the following:—Opium Suppression Bureau, $500; Foreign Wine Tax Bureau, $150; Kerosene Special Tax Bureau, $50; Kiukiang Customs Superintendent, $100; Kiukiang S.A.D., $20; Comprador J. M. & Co., $100; Comprador B. and S., $100. From the above list it is deduced that the finances of the Kiukiang Special Administrative District are not flourishing.

BIG LEGACY.

SINGAPORE COURT ARGUMENT.

DAUGHTER'S CLAIM.

An application involving a legacy of $1,000,000 left by the late Oei Tiong Ham, the Java millionaire, to one of his daughters, Mrs. Gwendoline Kan, a dispute as to whether the trustees of the estate should pay this legacy to Mrs. Kan or her husband, and questions of Dutch East Indies law, came before the Chief Justice (Sir William Marison) at Singapore last week. Three affidavits by Dutch lawyers were among the bulky file of documents presented to the judge.

Dr. Teng Liang Kan, husband of Mrs. Kan, applied to be joined as defendant in an action in which Mrs. Kan is claiming an order directing the trustees of the Oei Tiong Ham estate to pay her this legacy. Mr. J. Aitken appeared for Dr. Kan, Mr. A. P. Robinson for the trustees, and Mr. H. B. Layton for Mrs. Kan.

An affidavit by Dr. Kan was read, and was to the effect that when he married in 1906 he entered into a marriage contract under which there was to be no community of property between husband and wife, the property of the plaintiff was to be managed by him, and he was to enjoy the income from the property of his wife. At that time both his wife and himself were Chinese with European status in Java, and were in much the same position in life, both being the children of wealthy parents.

"Luxury and Extravagance."

His wife's father, however, was an exceptionally wealthy man, who brought the plaintiff up in the lap of luxury and extravagance, while he was brought up with a due regard for the value of money. Under the marriage settlement he claimed that he was entitled to receive this legacy and to manage the same.

In 1925 plaintiff obtained from the Cantonal Court in Amsterdam a decree enabling her to do all necessary things regarding the inheritance from her father's estate by falsely representing that her husband was domiciled in Amsterdam, whereas it was Paris, while she herself was residing at Wimbledon.

His wife now lived in fashionable society in England, and at one time she was a self-styled lady and courtesan. She was so extravagant in her habits that he was afraid that if the legacy was paid to her it would be spent in a short time and she and the children of the marriage would be left destitute.

Divorce at Amsterdam.

In June, 1926, Mrs. Kan obtained a decree of divorce at Amsterdam, but he was advised that this divorce had no significance before it had been dealt with by the final court of appeal and registered. He asked that all proceedings with regard to his wife's property should be stayed in Singapore, and that they should be decided in Java, where his wife had obtained an order to intervene in the action which he had commenced against the trustees of the estate in the Java courts.

His Lordship asked why this case could not be fought out in Java. Why should the parties come to an English judge to settle it?

Mr. Layton replied that the testator was domiciled in Singapore—that point having been decided by the Court of Appeal here—and he left property in Singapore to meet this legacy.

His Lordship: It seems perfectly ridiculous that I should be asked to settle whether the husband or the wife is entitled to this legacy, when the whole thing is governed by Dutch law.

Mr. Layton said that there were powerful reasons why it would be at least difficult to settle the matter in Java, and he submitted that the plaintiff was entitled to a decision in the Singapore court.

Support From Trustees.

Mr. Robinson, on behalf of the trustees, supported the application to join Dr. Kan as defendant. The position was, he said, that two persons were claiming the same sum from the trustees. One was Dr. Kan who had started proceedings in Java for that purpose, and the other was Mrs. Kan, who had started proceedings in Singapore. The trustees were advised by their Dutch solicitors that Mrs. Kan, according to the Dutch law, could not give a legal discharge to the trustees in view of her marriage contract, that the divorce which she had obtained was not yet good, and that the judgment in Amsterdam giving Mrs. Kan authority to deal with the legacy was not in rem, and that any court in Java could go

EUROPEAN PLANTERS ATTACKED.

DUTCH EAST INDIES INCIDENTS.

AGGRESSOR SHOT DEAD.

Batavia, Dec. 14. During the search of the house of a mandore on Huberta Estate, Padang, who was suspected of theft, the mandore attacked an assistant named Peterson, who received a parang wound twenty inches long on the left arm. An assistant named Spoor, who rushed to the assistance of his colleague, was also attacked.

In the meantime the manager, van Schaik, arrived, whereupon the mandore ordered the coolies to attack the Europeans. The manager fired twice, killing the mandore and wounding another man. Peterson is in hospital.

Batavia, Dec. 15. A Chinese coolie attacked an assistant named Dumont on Kwalla Krapoh Estate, Medan. Mr. Dumont sustained a serious cut in the throat and lost much blood. He was removed to hospital.

The reason for the attack was that Mr. Dumont had criticised the work of the coolie.

A State lottery to raise funds for the building of the proposed new Thames bridges was recently suggested to the Government in the House of Commons by Commander Carlyon Bellairs (Con. Maidstone). Commander Bellairs instances the fact that the proceeds of a lottery in 1736 were used to build Westminster Bridge. He said:

"If there were a secret ballot on my proposals I would get widespread support, but many M.P.s are timid and they fear to further any such scheme in public."

His Lordship: How can I give a decision against the Appeal Court of Amsterdam on a point of Dutch law?

Mr. Robinson said that all the applicant had to show was that there was an issue to be tried between the three parties.

His Lordship agreed that he was anticipating the future, but he pointed out that if he made this order he would be asked to say that the Amsterdam court was wrong.

Mr. Robinson said that he presumed the court would order the money to be paid into court, to abide the result of the proceedings in Java.

His Lordship: When is this divorce going to be completed? It is a year and a half since the decree was made.

One Solution of Difficulty.

Mr. Robinson said he did not know, but it would be a solution of the difficulty if Mrs. Kan pushed on with that divorce and got it settled in her favour. If she got her divorce she would be in a position to give the trustees a receipt but until then the trustees were open to the fire of both parties. Mrs. Kan had applied in Singapore for the money to be paid to her, and there was nothing to prevent Dr. Kan taking exactly similar action in Java. In that case there might be orders made in both courts, and that was a position the trustees were entitled to be protected against.

After hearing Mr. Layton's Lordship held that the application of Dr. Kan must be refused. Subsequently his Lordship refused an application by Mr. Layton for an order that the legacy should be paid into court.

CHINA VICTORY.

FINE FIGHT IN CHARITY GAME.

ONE GOAL DECIDES.

By the only goal of the game scored twelve minutes from the end, South China eliminated England from the International Charity Cup Competition yesterday. For just over an hour, England were a shade the better, but gradually the Chinese, gained the upper hand, their better developed teamwork turning the tide in a gruelling encounter.

It was one of the most enjoyable games seen in Hongkong for many a long day. The sides were well matched, brilliant touches by individuals in both halves keeping the football crisp, while the many clever passing movements which broke down speaks volumes for the soundness of the defenses.

Sims was outstanding. Always he appeared to be in the right spot, his interceptions kept the Chinese forwards subdued for long periods, while he passed the ball better than any man on the field. Everest on the one side and Watson on the other gave him admirable assistance.

Both goalkeepers had anxious periods in the first half, but although England exerted considerable pressure, the inside-men were not forcible enough. Vernon did much good work; he made full use of his wingers, was on the alert for a shot at long range, but dash in front of goal appeared to be lacking, while one would have thought he would have tried a few speculative shots in the later stages.

Once in the second half, Lee Wai-koon had the England goal at his mercy, but struck the post with a terrific shot, and some ten minutes later at the other end, Vernon gathered the ball nicely and sent in a piledriver which hit the foot of the upright and shot out of play. These were the nearest approaches to goalkeeping until Wong Pak-cheung netted from an unexpected opportunity with 12 minutes to go.

There were thrilling incidents at both ends, but England were disorganised towards the close, and with both Northey and Wynne off the field injured for some time, it was surprising that the Chinese did not add to their lead.

Interpret Team Changes.

It has been decided to play another Interpret Trial game before the eleven to go to Shanghai is finally selected. Wynne, Xavier, Everest, McNiven and Chan Kwong-ai are included in the Probables team. The Association has not announced what the opposition will be, but it seems to me a very strong Possibles XI could be fielded, quite capable of giving the Probables a hard game.

ENGLAND WINS TEST MATCH.

SOUTH AFRICAN "TAIL" WAGS.

Johannesburg, Dec. 27. The result of the first Test Match between England and South Africa was that England won by ten wickets. The full scores were:

South Africa, 196 and 170;
England, 313 and 57 (for no wickets).

South Africa's second innings was marked by a collapse in the early stages, the score reading 78 for the loss of eight wickets. But then, Vincent (53) and Coen (41 not out) made a record for a ninth wicket partnership, putting on 80 before being separated.

Geary took five wickets for 60 and Hammond five for 36.

England went in for the second time and compiled the required runs without the loss of a wicket. —Reuter.

FRIENDLY CRICKET.

I.R.C. "B" v. R.A.F.

The following will represent the Indian Recreation Club in the above match on Saturday, the 31st, at Sockunpoo Valley:—M. P. Madar (Capt.), R. Nazarin, A. S. Sufiad, D. Mohamed, Sirdar Khan, A. Rahmin, S. A. Hussain, U. T. Thad, A. Butt, E. M. K. Malubhoj and J. M. Ramjahn.

YACHT RACE TO MACAO.

LACK OF BREEZES SPOIL EVENT.

"U AND I" WINS EASILY.

U and I, the yacht sailed by Mr. H. S. Rouse, won the Royal Hongkong Yacht Club's annual race to Macao, crossing the finishing line at the Club yesterday at 5.30 p.m. having left Hongkong at 7.30 a.m. on Monday in company with ten other boats.

Helen came in at nine o'clock, but she did not finish the race, coming up to the Club with her engine running. U and I rounded the mark at Macao at 5.30 p.m. on Monday, followed about 20 seconds later by La Cigale. The other boats were about five miles from the mark at that time. The wind, which had been N. W. began to fall and the ebb tide was running out strongly. U and I took the north side of Lantau on the return trip, with the wind west by north.

On Northern Course. At daylight yesterday, she was south of Tai O and tried to turn to the south of Lantau but there was very little wind. She then went on the northern course, picking up a west by north wind. Snipe and Helen were making up to the South side of San Phau islands, the former with Mr. Easterbrook, his two sons and Mr. Jack on board.

The wind was light for U and I from the East Brother up to Cap-simun where she picked up good strong breeze which carried her through on one leg to the Club. She was led from Chungshue by the Club boat, Typhoon, sailed by Mr. Len Ryan.

Typhoon gave the useful news that La Cigale was not ahead of them; and Mr. Waldegrave gave information that the other boats had taken a course south of Lantau and were becoming off Cheung Chau at three o'clock. Sea Rover, with Mr. Waldegrave on board did not finish.

U and I crossed the line at 5.30 p.m. yesterday having been twenty-four hours on the return trip.

Helen Uses Engine.

The next boat to arrive at the Yacht Club was the Helen which came in dead on nine under engine power. She had on board Mr. A. L. Shields, Commodore of the Club, Mr. Recker, Engr. Comdr. Gordon and Mr. Marshall. She reported a fine easterly breeze when the eleven boats left Murray Pier on Monday morning.

She continued up to Castle Peak, the order then being La Cigale, U and I, Snipe, Helen, Curlew, Norseman, and Dorothy. H. Feathers and Azuma had taken a course south of Lantau. The wind "dropped" after the boats had passed Tree Island and U and I and La Cigale drew ahead.

After passing Lantau Helen passed the two boats which had taken the southern course and it was seen that there had been little advantage to be gained in the choice of the northern or southern course.

Dead Calm at Night.

U and I and La Cigale passed the mark at Macao at 5.30 p.m. on Monday. The other boats drifted and apparently anchored for the evening. The night was drizzly with a slight haze and a dead calm.

A breeze sprung up at daybreak yesterday, however, and the boats passed the Macao mark in the following order:—Norseman, Feathers, Queen Bee, Curlew, Snipe, Dorothy II, Helen and Azuma. On the return trip they all took the south course except Dorothy II, Snipe and Helen.

Helen arrived at the Club at nine o'clock last night, having come under power from the Kowloon Star ferry wharf with a strong tide against her. Dorothy II was ahead of Helen going through Cap-simun, but after that the Helen crew had seen nothing of her. Snipe was seen off the Hongkong Club. News of the other boats received at the Club last night was that Feathers had towed La Cigale into the Harbour, Bay and therefore neither of them finished.

With these two out, Sea Rover giving up earlier, Helen coming in under power and U and I having crossed the line, it left six boats to be accounted for.

Many Give Up.

These were Azuma, Norseman, Queen Bee, Curlew, Snipe and Dorothy II.

Snipe crossed the line at the Yacht Club at 11.25 last night, being the second boat to finish. This morning Curlew was coming in, apparently determined to finish the course.

Azuma gave up last night and it is believed that Norseman, Queen Bee and Dorothy II have given up. At any rate the time limit for the race was this morning.

U and I therefore runs out a good winner, although her actual lead when handicaps are taken into consideration has not yet been worked out.

He did not recover consciousness and died in hospital.

CRICKET NOTES.

[By "Looker On."]

The chief interest in the holiday cricket centred around the annual match between the Army and the Club on the Hongkong ground. This was played on Monday and Tuesday and resulted in a most creditable win for the Army by 67 runs. I believe this is the first time, for very many years, that the Army have managed to win this game.

The defeat of the Club is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that the Army were without many of their best players. Erskine and Hankey are away from the Colony at the moment. Bingham, Burton, Bridgeland and Thorpe were unable to play and Evers, who scored a very well played not-out century for the Married v. the Single on Saturday, went and crocked himself just after doing so and so was not available also. On paper, therefore, the Army were a weak side.

The Club, on the other hand, were at full strength. They were a particularly good batting side and included no less than seven interlopers. But their bowling, perhaps, was not quite as strong as their batting.

For their victory, the Army have to thank the following:

In the batting line, Captain Dobbie and Captain Morris. The former compiled 98 runs for once out and the latter 87 for twice out. So that towards a total of 287 compiled by the Army in their two innings Dobbie's and Morris's joint contribution amounted to 185.

In the bowling line, Captain Dobbie, Lance Corporal Miles and S.O.M.S. Newberry. Dobbie's 7 wickets for 28 runs on the first day of the match was a particularly fine effort considering that he had made 18 not-out just before Miles was bowling very well, especially on Tuesday. So was Newberry. He is a newcomer to this class of cricket in Hongkong and proved a distinct acquisition to his side. He is also a useful bat and fields well. In fact, he is a good keen cricketer. It is surprising he was not discovered before.

For the Club, Hayward and Pearce batted well and Leach and Wales bowled well. Hayward was unlucky to be bowled by a good length ball that never rose an inch in his second innings. He was batting very soundly when this happened although Dobbie made him think a bit at times.

Pearce made a very well played 54 in the Club's second innings. In fact, he looked as if he was there for ever when he, rather impetuously, had a dip at one from Miles and was well caught in the long field by Drysdale. A great pity, although I doubt whether he could have got any of the Club "tail" to stay with him to enable him to knock off the runs required for victory. He and Hayward together contributed 100 out of the Club's total of 136 in their second innings!

Wales is to be congratulated on his bowling. His figures of 10 wickets for 101 runs in about 36 overs speak for themselves. He is a very much improved bowler and needs watching very carefully as he gains more pace off the wicket than one would expect.

So much for the Army Club match. The next game in the series is between the Navy and the Club. This is to be played on Saturday and Monday next. And the last one between the Army and the Navy takes place on the Hongkong C.C. ground on Wednesday and Thursday, the 4th and 5th January.

Of the other holiday games the most important were Married v. Single on the Hongkong ground and Kowloon v. the Navy on the K.C.C. ground. The former resulted in a draw rather in favour of the Married. Captain Evers, as previously stated, making a very fine century. A most creditable performance considering that he has up till now this season been out of action as the result of an operation for appendicitis, this being his first appearance. The Navy just managed to save their game with Kowloon. Goodwin seems to have struck his form capturing, in all, 7 wickets for 67 runs. Thomson also maintained his usual form by taking 8 wickets for 112. E.C. Fincher batted well in both innings scoring over 60 each time. He seems to be one of the most consistent batsmen in the Colony at the moment.

In the first Division of the League, the Civil Service sustained another defeat—this time at the hands of the University. The latter seem to be a very useful side this year and I should not be at all surprised to see that they maintained their position at the top of the League.

PRINCIPAL CHARACTERS.

MRS. DE BURGH, an Irish widow, and BEATA, her only daughter, a young novelist, having seen an advertisement relating to an old country house, decide to inspect it.

CHAPTER II.

The West wind got up in the night and cried in the chimney and through the keyholes. The next morning there was no trace of the fog, and Beata and her mother were full of anticipation of seeing clean country once again, when they had left the monstrous town behind.

The sky had clouded over, and it was raining by the time they left Liverpool Street, but the rain and cloud did not damp Beata's rosy anticipation, nor her mother's. Mrs. de Burgh was, as someone had discovered, in many ways the younger of the two. They were quite sure that the Moated Grange was going to be all they could hope for.

Some discerning people like Lady Lambert had found it oddly pathetic the way Beata took care of her mother. It was almost as though the positions had been reversed. Beata was wont to say that she had had her mother on her mind since she was four years old. There had been Tom de Burgh's long illness and his wife's devoted attendance upon him, and her close confinement to the sick-room, which sometimes had made her pale and a little weary. Her little girl, worshipping the mother's beauty and softness, had had an unchildish apprehension of the real sadness of her mother's life, and had grieved over it passionately.

It was Beata who had taken her mother away from Glen Assaroo, and not altogether because the country was in so disturbed a state and houses being raided everywhere, and many of the people who had been kind and friendly so sadly changed.

It was her mother's face as she looked down at her hands with a bewildered air as though she saw emptiness, her obvious incapacity to fill the days which Tom de Burgh and his needs had kept busy from morning till night. There had been no weariness, no languor of love because of that long strain. They had gone to Italy, and they had spent more money than they had calculated upon. Italy and Austria had not satisfied them, and for the time being, though a good many of their friends had stuck it out, Ireland, the changed Ireland, was no place for two lonely women. So they had made up their minds, or rather Beata had made up hers, that a quiet few months in the country, not too far distant from London, would be best for them. She had begun to write and to get published. The Moated Grange sounded ideal for literary work. Mrs. de Burgh could go back to her gardening, which she had learnt to love during the years of her husband's illness, when it had been her way of getting air and a certain amount of exercise while remaining within hearing of the bell by the sick man's bed which he rang when he needed her.

At Liverpool Street, while they waited for their train, their eyes were attracted to a little group of three naval cadets and one very charming lady. She was obviously the mother of the tall boy, and was apparently very much in love with his beautiful mother. The other two boys were much younger, and to judge by their neat kit were travelling home for their Christmas holidays with the older boy to look after them.

The charming lady was very freakish, to the intense joy of the two little sailor boys, who rolled about in a highly hilarious fashion while she chaffed her tall son about his ties and socks, all the little vanities of his wardrobe. It was subservient of all discipline, of course, but to the infatuated son the lovely mother could evidently do no wrong.

Beata drew her mother to observe the incident in high delight. "He will have to punch those little boys' heads before he gets them back to the proper frame of mind towards him if they are going to be together next term," said Beata, who was an authority on boys and their ways. All the little boys of the country side, before the calamity caught them and dashed them to pieces or saved them only for future bitter disillusionment, had been Beata's friends and adorers. She had been a happy mixture of the feminine girl and the girl who could do things a boy could do as well or even better than he.

The tall boy glanced at Beata as though he knew what she had said.

The glance was at once shy and mischievous. Then he was protesting to his mother. "Please don't rag any more, darling, not now, at all events."

They caught sight of the party again alighting at a wayside station. The tall boy and his mother were received by a brown-faced, pleasant-looking gentleman who was obviously the husband and father. The two little boys had a comfortable-looking lady wrapped up in furs to meet them and a footman to receive their luggage. The tall boy said something to the little boys, while the elderly-looking man, who seemed to be the mother's "elder," were greeting each other. He made a feint of hugging the two little sleek, oiled heads together, but it was done very gently.

Then he was receiving the wild caresses of a spaniel who evidently had just escaped from somebody's custody since he trailed a bit of string after him. The boy's head, as he bent it to the dog in the light of the station-lamp, had the same wave in it as the spaniel's coat; only, of course, it was cut so short that the wave was hardly perceptible.

Just as the train began to move the boy looked up and caught Beata's eyes upon him. She did not attempt to draw back. That old friendship with many boys, said to think of now, had left her very self-conscious where the other sex was concerned.

The boy coloured, and then very shyly lifted his hat. Then the train went off.

"He must have seen that we were amused," said Mrs. de Burgh, in a flutter. "What nice people they looked! I wonder if they live far from the Moated Grange."

"You are thinking that we might know them," said Beata, looking at her mother's glowing face. "But, darling, these things don't happen in England. You must come with introductions, and we shall be only birds of passage if we take the Moated Grange."

"I agree with you that we shall probably be forestalled. It sounds such a very tempting proposition even though the nearest railway station is fifteen miles away. That would be nothing to a car. I should think lots of Americans would be after a Moated Grange."

While she discouraged her mother from being too hopeful, she was conscious of a great desire that they might have those beautiful people for neighbours and friends. Of course, it would be a fairy-tale, but fairy-tales sometimes happened in real life, and those nice people did not look as though they would be very unapproachable.

The chauffeur who drove them from the King's Arms at Dunlo had not driven any other applicant. So far they were in luck. "They come and they go," he said to Beata, who had taken the steering wheel from him for a bit. "It's a rare pretty place in summer, when the water-lilies be out all over the moat. I don't fancy it myself, Winter or Summer. I'd like to be where I could see the pictures."

"Are there pictures in Dunlo?" Beata asked, in some surprise. They had found Dunlo fast asleep—all the shops shuttered, and a black cat curled about in the centre of the roadway. Their car, as they passed over the cobbles, had seemed to make a terrible clatter.

"Pictures? Two picture houses. And a travelling circus now and again. You should see Dunlo on market-day. It is lively then. Lots of people about."

They had taken quite a time to procure a lunch at the King's Arms, and had waited afterwards for the car which was out. It was going to be darkish by the time they arrived at the Moated Grange. Beata was sorry they could not see the house by daylight. She wanted so much to see the garden and the paddock and the lake and the surrounding country. The lake sounded like Glen Assaroo.

After all, when they arrived the rain had ceased and a long streak of pale light in the Western sky revealed the house, which was more imposing than they had expected. The house stood dark against a pale sky behind. A double line of windows caught the watery gleam of the sun. At one corner of the house was a small square tower. They drove across a bridge that spanned the moat, under an archway, into a square courtyard. Perhaps there had once been a portcullis. At one corner a slight of steps ascended to the house door. A wing facing them as they entered was apparently the kitchen wing.

While they looked about them light showed in the faint glow above the hall-door; the door opened. A man servant stood against the background of a lit hall, against tapestry and suits of armour, looking out at them as they stood at the foot of the steps.

"You came to see the house?" he said, peering at them.

He spoke in a flat, expressionless voice, and his face was the pale, whiskered face of the respectable man-servant.

"If you please," said Beata, and gave her mother a reassuring squeeze of the arm. It was something she always did when they embarked on a new adventure or reached any new stage of one. It meant that she, Beata, was there to take care of her, and that they were going to see the thing, whatever it might be, through to the end. Perhaps there was more than that in it. She had a queer feeling of aversion for the man, of fear of the house which she could not have explained. Not for worlds would she have let her mother know her folly.

"Won't you please come in?" said the man, and led the way, closing the door behind them when they had entered. "If you will wait a moment I shall light up the rooms."

"Electric light?" said Beata, with a business-like air. The man, she thought, smiled faintly.

"Our master wouldn't hear of it," he answered. "Not an old house like this. He'd like candles all the time, would Sir Hilary. They'd prove expensive these times."

Sir Hilary! So that was the name, or part of the name, of the owner of the Moated Grange. Sir Hilary what? Her mother was asking delightedly while they waited in the hall if Beata did not think him the real English butler, his flat, slightly whiskered face, and the thin sandy hair parted in the middle. "I am quite sure he walks flat-footed. I wonder what he'd think of Terry, who used to argue everything out before he'd take an order, and join in the conversation at the table! Do you remember how Terry laughed when your cousin Nigel stayed with us and told such rattling good stories?"

"Sir Hilary what?" Beata kept asking herself. It had not occurred to her to consider the ownership of the Moated Grange.

The man came back soft-footed and ushered them into a lit room. It was a very prettily room, walled in books, with carpet and curtains of pink damask in which pleasant colour the chairs and the sofa by the fire were also covered. The fireplace had fine brass hobs and a basket grate, and it was lined with old blue Dutch tiles—altogether a very pleasant interior.

"Oh, but this is charming!" cried Mrs. de Burgh, while her daughter had often inculcated upon her, without possessing it herself, of not praising too much the thing she wanted to acquire.

She whispered into Beata's ear as they followed the man across a little corridor that he did walk flat-footed as a butler should: it was all just perfect.

"Or a great cat," Beata said in her own mind, and noticed that even on the polished floors of the corridor the man's tread was soundless. He must have india-rubber soles to his shoes.

The dining-room was low, brown and paneled, with a gilt of china and glass in its wall-cupboards. Like the library, it struck chill, but that was to be expected in fireless rooms at this period of the year.

The drawing-room was equally charming with the other rooms. The white carpet, deep and soft, the heavy white curtains against the three long windows, the white walls, were relieved by the rose-colour of rugs and cushions and sofas, that looked thoroughly comfortable. Obviously the Moated Grange was very old, but it had been modernised so far as comfort went, and modernised with care and taste. With fires on the hearth nothing could be more charming. Everywhere there were precious bits of crystal, of china and glass. In the gilt panelling of the walls were oval water-colour portraits of ladies. Above the fireplace a portrait dominated the room. It was in oils, and by its vividness the water-colour ladies looked faded.

The lady, leaning forward a little, with bunches of ringlets by her ears and a long-waisted blue satin Victorian frock, watched her, with bright roguish eyes that followed her wherever she moved. It was a living and speaking portrait.

"Sir Hilary's grandmother," said the man, following her gaze—"and Sir Hilary himself."

He whisked aside the little curtain which covered a picture on an easel.

"What a handsome man!" sighed Mrs. de Burgh, as the picture came in view.

Sir Hilary had his grandmother's colouring, the grey eyes, dark-lashed, the close dark hair, the fine distinguished features. But where her expression was gay and innocently roguish, her grandson's was pensive. His hand propped his cheek as he looked sideways out of the picture.

"Twere done," said the man-servant, in his dull expressionless voice, "the year after Master Hugh were killed in the war. Her ladyship died that Midsommer."

THE ARMED ROBBER MENACE.

SHANGHAI ELECTRIC ALARM SYSTEM.

INTERESTING DEVICE.

The first official demonstration of the newest method in Shanghai to cope with the ever-increasing armed robber problem, was given last week in Sinza police station in the presence of Mr. S. Feasenden, Chairman of the Municipal Council, Captain E. I. M. Barrett, Commissioner of Police, Captain Florio, Chief of the French Police, Captain W. G. Clarke, Director of Criminal Intelligence, the inspectors and detectives in charge of the police stations, and a large number of other detectives and interested municipal and French police.

The apparatus is an electric burglar device, which is being installed by the Oriental Electric Protective Association wherein every house which subscribes to the system has direct electrical connection with the nearest police station. The police department has given official sanction to the service, and will provide adequate space in various stations for the installation of the necessary units within the police stations.

Demonstration at Sinza.

The adequacy of the system was amply demonstrated at the test. Officers in the station, with the exception of Chief Inspector Aiers, did not know from which house or at what time the alarm would be given. A messenger went to the designated place, pressed a button, and roused the station. The station force turned out en masse, and within two minutes they were at the dwelling in Myburgh Road. Had armed robbers actually been inside, they would have met with more trouble than they had expected.

The apparatus is simple enough as far as the subscriber is concerned. The company supplies as many push buttons as he may desire, and will install them at convenient points—at the head of the bed, under a counter, alongside the cash box, near the door, etc. Company engineers will seal windows or doors in such a manner that should they be opened, the circuit will be broken, by which process the station at once will be roused by the ringing of a gong in the charge-room. Once the plant has been used a representative of the company will make proper connections again in the house. The mechanism is not dependent upon municipal electricity, for the company installs its own storage cells, which are constantly recharged.

Quick Alarms Needed.

It long has been recognized in police circles that armed robbers could efficiently be dealt with were the station but informed at the time, instead, as sometimes is the case, several hours later. The gallant deeds last month of Sgt. Henton in West Hongkew and Sgt. Read in Sinza, have proved this, they say. By the method just described residents and shopkeepers will be able to inform them immediately anything goes wrong.

LITERARY TREASURES SOLD.

£2,000 PAID FOR LETTER WRITTEN BY BURNS.

London, Dec. 16. An autographed letter by Burns, containing the song "My Love is Like a Red, Red Rose," was sold at Sotheby's to-day for £2,000 to a London dealer.

A copy of Rudyard Kipling's "Schoolboy Lyrics," which fetched £700 at Sotheby's, is destined for America.

He let the curtain fall over the picture, and going to what seemed a part of the paneled wall he touched something, and a dark space opened in the wall. One would not have suspected a door.

He held the lamp high, over his head.

"Lady Agatha's room," he said. "This year's bedroom. A very pretty room, but it is strike cold." Yes! It did strike cold. Beata peeped in under the man's arm. She saw what seemed to her a very pretty room indeed. She caught the dull glint of a looking-glass on a mahogany dressing-table, saw the chintz curtains of a four-poster bed. As the man moved the lamp about she saw a big mahogany wardrobe and deep comfortable chairs. But she had no desire to explore further. The room was icy cold.

"A bit of fire do make a lot of difference," said the man, and there was a shade of apology in the expressionless voice, as he closed the door.

It was as though they had returned from the Arctic regions to Midsommer.

ALLEGED HOSPITAL THEFTS.

CONTRACTOR'S COOLIE DISCHARGED.

A charge of larceny of seven basin, plugs and a small glass pump, the property of the General Hospital (Diocesan Boys' School), was brought against a contractor's coolie before Mr. W. Schofield, at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning.

The defendant pleaded that he had found the articles lying about and was taking them back to the hospital.

A Chinese watchman, in evidence, said he saw the defendant approaching him from the direction of the contractor's matedness. On being searched, the articles were found in the defendant's pockets.

After hearing the evidence, his Worship said there was insufficient evidence to show that the defendant intended to steal the things. He could easily have hidden them, instead of carrying them about in his pockets.

The defendant was accordingly discharged.

LOCAL MOTOR ACCIDENT.

CHILD KILLED; MOTHER INJURED.

A motor accident took place yesterday, at 10 o'clock in the morning, near the Bowington Canal.

It appears that motor car No. 266, in an attempt to avoid a passenger who alighted from a tramcar, swerved sharply and ran into a sampan woman, who was carrying a child on her back.

The woman and the child were knocked over and received serious injuries, the child dying soon afterward. The woman was later removed to the Government Civil Hospital, where her condition is still serious.

The passenger on the tramcar, who caused the motor car to swerve, was also struck and was thrown into a ditch, but his injuries were such that he was not removed to hospital.

The chauffeur of the motor car concerned in the accident is at present detained by the police.

BIG HAUL OF OPIUM.

OVER 200 TINS IN SACK.

A sack containing 200 tins of prepared opium was recovered from the water under the Tin Ching Wharf, at Tai Kok Tsui early on Saturday morning, and, on the application of a Chinese detective, before Mr. W. Schofield at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, the drug was ordered to be confiscated.

In making the application, the detective said that, acting on information, he went to the Tin Ching Wharf at 12.30 a.m. on Saturday last and after dredging the water under the pier, a sack attached to an anchor was recovered. In this sack was the opium, contained in 214 tins.

HARBOUR STRIKE IN CALCUTTA.

1,500 COOLIES DEMAND HIGHER WAGES.

Calcutta, Dec. 12. Fifteen hundred coolies employed on the Calcutta jetties, who went on strike during the week-end for higher wages have not yet resumed.

Interviewed by the Associated Press, the Chairman of the Port Commissioners said that he had no fear that the strike would cause serious inconvenience.

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL.

LOCAL ORPHANS TO BE TRAINED.

Those interested in education in Hongkong will be pleased to learn that those at present in charge of St. Louis Industrial School are about to open a School of Arts and Trades. This new departure, undertaken solely on behalf of orphans and poor children, is aimed not only to give moral education but also to provide the means whereby an honest livelihood may be gained through the channel of a suitable trade. There are in Hongkong many who deplore the fact that much of the education extended to the Chinese youth is but merely a gateway to the office and the shop. In the scramble for learning much of what is best in native handicraft has been neglected. Hongkong prefers to sell rather than make. Those, therefore, who would see more of the artisan in our midst are invited to co-operate to the scheme, for the work entails heavy expenditure and funds are necessary to provide workshop equipment and for the maintenance of the orphans.

The sons of Don Bosco have undertaken work of this nature in many other countries with results that have been more than gratifying and much credit is due to the local Order for contemplating such a beginning in the Colony. In the past St. Louis Industrial School has turned out many worthy scholars of a type fit to take their place in the world. We wish the new School of Arts and Trades every success.

MANILA PURCHASES.

GOVERNMENT URGED TO BUY
LOCALLY ONLY.

The Philippine Chamber of Commerce has filed a petition with the Department of Commerce urging the Government to limit its purchases locally and abolish its purchasing agency in New York.

The petition states that the present system works to the disadvantage of local merchants. People doing business locally pay taxes for this business and it is but right that they be given a chance to supply the Government's needs without having to underpay the manufacturer abroad, it is pointed out.

Cipriano Unson, Secretary of Commerce and Communications, said that the point of the local merchants is well taken, but that so many other things enter into the present system that must be thoroughly considered before any definite steps are taken. He said he expects to make known his stand on the matter at an early date.

The purchases, being made by the Bureau of supply have been the subject of complaints not only from the local merchants but from other branches of the government as well. Municipal and provincial governments complain of the great delay occasioned by having their purchases made through the bureau of supply.

The price question has also been a matter of stiff controversy. It is charged by not a few provincial officials that in many instances they could make their purchases quicker and at much lower prices if they did so direct from the merchant.

SHANGHAI DIVORCE.

JUDGMENT GIVEN IN THE SPENCER CASE.

An H. M. Supreme Court at Shanghai on Thursday, his Honour Judge Peter Grain delivered judgment in the case in which Frieda Elsa Spencer petitioned the Court to grant a divorce from her husband William Henry Spencer and also asked for custody of the children of the marriage. There was a cross-petition by the husband.

Mr. Tyebo Wing appeared for the petitioner and Mr. S. H. Lewis conducted the case for the husband. Mr. Lewis was not, however, in Court and Mr. A. Covey represented the respondent on this occasion.

His Lordship came to the conclusion that the charge of adultery against Mrs. Spencer and Ludolf Duhse had not been proved but that there was sufficient proof of the charge of adultery alleged in the petition against the husband. The cross-petition of the latter was, therefore, dismissed with costs and a decree nisi, with custody of the children, was granted to the petitioner. Mrs. Spencer, access being given to the respondent. Mr. Covey gave notice of appeal and intimated that fresh evidence would be adduced.

SHIPPING BOARD.

SALE OF ATLANTIC SERVICES.

Action on the advertising for sale of the Shipping Board's two Atlantic cargo services has been deferred (states a Washington message) until such time as a report is furnished by a committee consisting of Commissioners Philip S. Teller, W. S. Hill and Jefferson Myers, designated by the Board to consider the projected sale of the three government-owned cargo lines operating out of Pacific Coast ports.

This committee was instructed to report promptly and submit new tenders of sale for the full Board's consideration. The Atlantic services involved are the American West African and the America-France lines. The three transpacific lines are the American Australian Orient, American Oriental Mail and Oregon Oriental.

At its last meeting the Board had before it tenders for the sale of the five services, but considered those for the Pacific Coast lines "as not meeting the situation." The Board has had the matter of advertising for sale of the three transpacific services together with the two cargo services on the Atlantic Coast for several months, but has been unable to arrive at an equitable agreement because of the divergence of views among the Board's membership as to the length of operating agreements that should be embodied in the form of advertisements for the three Pacific lines.

The committee appointed will endeavour to thresh out the difficulties revolving around the proposal of the ship sales committee that the Pacific Coast services be sold only on condition that the private operators keep the vessels on the same route and in the same business over a period of ten years. Some members of the Board have maintained that it should follow its present policy of requiring only five years of guaranteed operation. The Atlantic services are not involved in this particular conflict, the entire Board apparently being agreed that a five-year guarantee is sufficient in connection with their sale to private interests.

Style has robbed the nipsu of the only useful job he ever had.

NOT TO REPLY.NATIONALIST VIEW OF SOVIET NOTE.

Nanking, Dec. 22.

In an interview Dr. Wu Chao-chu, the Foreign Minister, when asked about Comrade Chicherin's Note to the Shanghai Commission of Foreign Affairs, said:

"I do not consider it necessary for Mr. Quo Tai-chi, the Shanghai Commissioner, and much less the Foreign Ministry, to reply. Mr. Chicherin's Note was a piece of propaganda which those familiar with Soviet methods quite expected in the circumstances."

Asked his opinion about the Soviet Commissioner's three points Mr. Wu said:

Although the Soviet Government has had many dealings with the Nationalist Government, it is true the Soviet has not recognized it as the government of all China, just as the Nationalist Government has never recognized the Soviet Government. The fact remains that Consuls appointed by the Soviet Union and stationed in territory under the jurisdiction of the Nationalist Government, have been recognized by the Government as such and permitted to function. The Government, having discovered that the consulates, contrary to international practice and fair dealing, have been used for other than consular purposes, namely, Communist propaganda and agitation, dangerous to the safety of the Government and, indeed, society, as witness the recent reign of terror at Canton, has considered it necessary to withdraw recognition from the Soviet Consuls and to expel them. These are matters of fact and political action. Mr. Chicherin's Note as to non-recognition, as well as the view of the Soviet Embassy in Tokyo that Nanking's declaration has no validity from the legal point of view, therefore are both beside the point.

Complicity at Canton.

As regards the denial of Mr. Chicherin that Soviet consulates and state commercial agencies have been used for Communist propaganda and that the Soviet Consulate in Canton had anything to do with the recent Red uprising, we are in possession of documents, taken from the Soviet Consulate in Canton, which prove conclusively the Soviet's complicity in the Canton catastrophe. A partly burnt document, numbered 12,857, endorsed by the Seventh Enlarged Plenary Executive Committee of the Communist Third International, explains how the Communist Party must take command of the peasant movement in accordance with the programme of the Agrarian Revolution, and instructs, among other points, the disarming of the Minkun or Citizen Volunteers, and other forces of the gentry, at the same time arming the poor and middle class peasants to form an army.

Mr. Chicherin has laboured the point that Soviet Russia signed the 1924 Agreement with Peking, and not with the Nationalist Government. This new-born enthusiasm for the Peking militarists is amusing, and may be significant as a new orientation of Soviet policy, but I think the Soviet Commissar might have pursued the point further. Article 6 of that Agreement provides that each government pledges itself not to engage in propaganda directed against the political and social system of the other. He might, instead of a flat denial of complicity in events in CHINA FAMINE.FOUR MILLION ON VERGE OF STARVATION.

Peking, Dec. 27.

Foreigners in Shantung confirm the reports of the Famine Relief Societies that 4,000,000 people are on the brink of starvation in that province. In 35 districts out of 107 in the province less than ten per cent. of the crops have been harvested, while in another 30 districts the percentage ranges from 10 to 40.

Great numbers of the people are already subsisting on bark and chaff. The peak of the famine has not yet been reached, and the worst is yet to come.

The farmers, formerly prosperous, are disposing of their cattle for a mere song and emigrating. The local officials attribute the famine to drought and locusts but foreigners declare it is chiefly due to civil wars, banditry and exorbitant taxation.

There is no hope of raising sufficient funds in China to save great numbers from a lingering death, and outside help is earnestly needed.

Bandits and the military are not only accentuating famine conditions but are making it impossible to carry out extensive relief measures under foreign supervision, such as the building of roads and canals. Similar conditions prevail in Tamingfu, South Chihli, where only 20 per cent. of the crop has been harvested.

Reuter.

Canton, have said that, since the Soviet Government did not recognize the Nationalist Government, therefore this article had no application to Canton, which was under Nationalist jurisdiction.

Misplaced Faith.

The friendship which the Nationalist Party and the Nationalist Government had in the past exhibited towards the Communist Party and the Soviet Government had been due to the belief that the latter were sincere in their sympathy for the Chinese Nationalist movement, seeking freedom from bondage without and without an unimpeded development of China's national destiny. Recent events have fully exposed the Soviet attempts to denationalize the Nationalist movement and to convert China into a mere appanage of the Soviet Union, and their methods of destruction. Elementary considerations of self-defence require the removal of centres of hostile activity.

In June last, I informed the Soviet authorities that, while we were compelled to take steps against Chinese Communists who were obstructing and endangering our national revolutionary movement, we hoped that friendly relationship with the Soviet Government would be continued. Although I was, of course, aware of the intimate connexion between the Chinese Communist Party, the Third International, and the Soviet Government, I had hoped that my statement would be taken as a warning. It seems that the warning had had no effect. In taking this purely defensive measure, it is immaterial to us, whom such action happens to please or displease.—Kuo Min.

INSTONE BANKING CORPORATION.

OFFICIAL OPENING CEREMONY.

In the presence of a large gathering, mostly composed of prominent Chinese business men, the new Instone Bank, housing the Instone Banking Corporation, was officially opened this morning with complimentary speeches and a party.

The premises which are situated at 25, Des Voeux Road Central, near to the general Post Office, were recently taken over by the Corporation and renovated. Included among those present this morning in addition to Mr. N. I. Brewer, who is the President, were Mr. Wan Ching-fong, of Peking, Mr. Lee Yuk-teen, formerly Commissioner of Currency for Peking, Mr. Ho Wing (compradore of the Mercantile Bank), Mr. Lam Jak-fung, head of the Confucius Society, Mr. Kwok Chin-yung, Mr. P. C. Leo, secretary of the Bank, Mr. Lee Yuk-tin, vice-president, Mr. Tung Gung-suk, a Chinese scholar of Hongkong, Mr. K. F. Lay (manager of the Bank of Canton), and several foreign business men.

Flag Uncovered.

Those present were summoned to the main hall on the ground floor by the ringing of a bell and when the gathering was complete Mr. Brewer took the chair. Behind him, facing the main entrance, was a big red covering and after a short introductory speech which was delivered in Chinese, the red covering was drawn aside by Mr. Kwok Chin-yung, revealing the flag of the bank, (Hoi Mok).

The Bank's Aims.

In a brief address Mr. Brewer said: "To-day is the embodiment of an idea, I might almost say an ideal of mine, but its fruition has been much larger than originally intended. The original idea included the protection of savings, investigation of investments, impartial financial advice, and management of property. Many are too busy making money adequately to care for their investments. Many leave the Colony on holiday, and require competent and trustworthy management in their absence. Many have a preference for placing their property in the names of others as trustees. Everyone dies and there is much loss of estate in cases of unsatisfactory executorship."

Such an idea did not require a bank, not even a largely capitalized firm, but the support and acclamation with which the idea was received in all parts of China forced the expansion of the original scheme. Fung King Kwong, Hung Chung Kwan, Kwok Chun Ying, Cho Ming Cho, Lai Yuen Hung—these are not men to be content with so unambitious a programme as I had intended.

It must be a bank, a large bank, a bank with many branches, itself prominent in all investments that it is able to recommend to others. I admit that it is a great improvement that we should be financially able to exploit investments that our investigations have approved but consider that the expansion into many branches necessitated by their plans requires that a banker of experience should enter to guide such expansion. Among our supporters there are many such and there has been no difficulty in finding such a man for the purpose.

Having this day therefore brought the organization to the point where the wheels go round.

up at both ends of the control area, one being at Pokfulam, and the other a little to the west of the Main Gate of Government House.

Dr. Strahan—I wish to say that I have always understood the triangle to indicate that there is a corner there. There is nothing on the triangle to say it is a speed limit.

His Worship pointed out that the information was always in the regulations, in which, as a motorist, Dr. Strahan should have interested himself.

Dr. Strahan said that in other districts he had noticed the speed limit written on the triangles, but there was not this information in the triangles at Caine Road.

Inspector Alexander said that the speed limit was indicated on the triangle at the Pokfulam end. Dr. Strahan said that he had driven for over ten years in that area and he had never known that there was a speed limit set for it. His Worship—I propose to fine you $15.

Amongst the other summonses heard was one against the Chinese driver of a private car No. 937, for parking at Caine Road outside a building. He was fined $5.

AIR SHIP BASE IN CEYLON.

RESULTS OF RECENT INVESTIGATION.

Recently an Airship Mission, including the Director of Airship Development, Air Ministry, arrived in Ceylon and visited various parts of the Island with a view to finding suitable sites for the establishment of an airship base. They have submitted their report to this Government in which it is stated that they have investigated certain areas of land in various districts and have selected sites at (1) Puttalam, (2) Chilaw, (3) Negombo, (4) Angulana, and (5) Ambalanota, which they consider contain the necessary requirements essential for such a base. They are, however, unable to make a final selection until certain additional meteorological data are available.

In view of the fact that the establishment of an airship base in Ceylon will not only serve the Island but will also serve to refuel ships en route to various parts of the Empire, it is proposed to undertake the necessary additional meteorological observations. For this purpose more up-to-date instruments will be required in addition to the employment of observers for four new observation stations.

Estimated Cost.

The cost of this undertaking is estimated as follows:—Purchase of self-recording anemometers and rain gauges £1,200; purchase of self-recording temperature inversion apparatus, £400; and local cost of salaries, etc., £380; total £1,980. The annual recurrent expenditure for observers' salaries and incidental expenses will be Rs. 2,000.

It may be mentioned that the cost of a single mooring tower, excluding cost of the purchase of the land for the site and which possesses the minimum facilities for a demonstration flight, is about £70,000 rising to about £200,000 for the first fully equipped commercial base with single-mooring tower and ground equipment such as a permanent gas plant, Custom-house, etc.

The Finance Committee is requested to approve the proposed undertaking and to sanction supplementary provision as specified above.
